GORGEOUS SPECTACLE

Most Awe-Inspiring Ceremony Is Observed.

THOUSANDS CROWD INTO OLD ABBEY

Witness Crowns Placed Upon Royal Heads.

GOD SAVE THE KING, SING THE CHOIR BOYS

And Abbey Fairly Rocks with the Praises.

As Archbishop of Canterbury Gently Places Studded Circlet Upon the King's Head, Thousands of Electric Lights Being Suddenly Turned On in Full To Illuminate Great Spectacle. Silver Trumpets Blow the Royal Salute and George V Is Proclaimed Ruler Over Great Britain, Ireland and Wales—A Touching Part of Ceremony Comes When Prince of Wales Kisses Parent in Paying Homage to Royal Family.

London, June 22.—With pomp and pageantry putting to shame the historic splendor of the middle ages, democratic Britain gratified her inborn love of formal show, today, when amidst the most dazzling scenes recorded in history she crowned George V and his wife, Mary, "king and queen of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and the British dominions beyond the seas."

The crown was placed upon George's head at 12:37, and just fifteen minutes later the crowning of the queen, a much shorter ceremony, had been concluded.

The venerable Archbishop of Canterbury, summoning his rapidly-waning strength for the climax of the spectacular ceremonial, his hands trembling with emotion, placed the crowns upon the heads of the new rulers, at which the vast audience broke its restraint with a cheer that waking the echoes amid the time-dimmed rafters of the ancient Abbey, was taken up by the throngs without and carried to the ends of the British empire.

Despite the tremendous outpouring of the people, the magnificence of the coronation scene itself, and the general excitement, nothing could have been more apparent than that today's demonstration, from a popular standpoint, was far short of expectations. The crowds were enormous, but so far short of what the police and soldiers were prepared to handle that the extensive preliminary work appeared actually ridiculous.

Notwithstanding that there were paid cheer-leaders along the line of the procession, the vocal outbursts were so lacking in spontaneity as to almost make the term "frost" apply with peculiar propriety to the portion of the event in which the middle classes figured.

The lack of genuine enthusiasm was generally commented upon by loyal Britishers, as well as cynical foreigners.

Perfect Management.

Inside the Abbey, naturally, where the royalists were gathered, there was enthusiasm enough to suit the most exacting. But wherever the pulse of the common people could be felt, it was found to beat feebly.

The stage management of the whole affair was perfect, reflecting the greatest credit of the executive genius on General Kitchener and the Duke of Norfolk, who, as earl marshal, worked out most of the details of the coronation. From first to last, there were few hitches and these of the slightest consequence.

The people began converging on the processional route early last evening, and all night long there was a constant hurrying towards points of vantage. By daylight the people were massed in immovable packs in several places. At other points, however, there was room for many more.

The movement of the troops toward the palace and along the route began shortly after midnight. General Kitchener personally directed the mobilization. Kitchener overruled the police in insisting on the maintenance of the barriers that he had caused to be erected across the intersecting streets in order to herd the populace. The police protested that the barriers would be a source of greatest danger to the spectators in the street in the event of a panic, but Kitchener answered that the preservation of an uninterrupted procession was of more importance. Kitchener was the military man throughout.

Foot Traffic Stops.

All foot traffic was stopped at 9:30 a. m. Immediately thereafter the first section of the procession got under way, and it arrived at the Abbey at 9:55. This division, made up of the foreign envoys, was given a reception second only to that accorded their majesties. The greeting given John Hays Hammond, the American representative, who rode in the seventh carriage, was extremely cordial, and the Yankee envoy was kept busy smiling and bowing his acknowledgments.

As the procession started, the lines of police and guardsmen forced back the already dense crowds, crushing people against the buildings at the most congested points. The result was an epidemic of faintings which occasioned the ambulance men the greatest difficulty owing to the trouble in reaching the victims

MOST LAVISH JEWEL DISPLAY

Some Expensive Ornaments Seen at Coronation.

COST WOULD RUN INTO THE MILLIONS

Diamonds and Other Precious Stones Displayed.

Duchess of Westminster Wears the Handsomest Coronet Seen in the Abbey and Lady Dartmouth Is Observed Wearing a Twelve-Diamond Tiara and Lady Harewood Has Wreath of Diamond Roses.

London, June 22.—Millions of dollars worth of jewels were displayed by the royal guests at the coronation ceremonies.

The Duchess of Westminister wore the handsomest coronet seen in Westminister Abbey at the coronation. The design was positvelly dazzling. It cost $100,000.

The Princess Christian wore the only coronet set with turquoises—the stones of prosperity. The turquoises alternated with diamonds on raised points. The Duchess of Albany's headdress consisted of a quadruple row of diamonds, surmounted in front by a half sun, the rays of which are formed by glittering brilliants. The Princess Alexander of Teck's tiara was formed of slanting wheatears of diamonds, meeting in front.

The tiara worn by the Duchess of Sutherland, who was one of the four peeresses chargod with the supporting of the queen's canopy, was a geometrical design of pearls and diamonds, lying against a band of diamonds. Pear-shaped pearls were used to give the headdress greater height. The Duchess of Newcastle's diadem was a straight band of diamond lacework an inch and a half in depth and broadening in front into flat volutes of dazzling stones. Rising from one side of the central spike was a feather, cleverly simulated in diamonds. The Duchess of Beaufort wore a bandeau of diamond rosettes, rising into high ornamental scrolls in front.

The Duchess of Norfolk, wife of the earl marshal, master of today's ceremonies, had upon her head a crown composed of a high garland of diamond oak leaves and acorns, the badge of her husband's family for generations.

A Costly Tiara.

Lady Dartmouth had a tiara of twelve diamond fleur-de-lys, Lady Harewood a wreath of diamond roses, Lady Bessborough a circlet of seven large diamond clusters resting on a band of smaller ones, Lady Lonsdale a headdress of five large diamond stars rising from spikes mounted on invisible platinum supports and Lady Cranbrook a crown of high arches terminating in points.

As wife of the viceroy of Ireland, Lady Aberdeen wore eleven pear-shaped emeralds standing up on high spikes across the front of her crown, with a rose of flat-cut diamonds, embedded in gold and cabochon pearls at the center. Emeralds and diamonds also made up the ensemble in the crowns worn by Ladies Plymouth, Gerard, Carnarvon and Newborough. Lady Newborough, indeed, ran the Duchess of Westminster a close second, the assessed value of the former's tiara being $90,000.

Lady Ripon had a wonderful headdress made of a fine tracery of diamonds taking the form of a dozen interlaced wreaths. Her daughter, Lady Julia Duff, had on an immense Cartier bow with a twisted ribbon bandeau, all made of diamonds. Lady Clementine Waring was in a diamond cap designed after the cap worn by Queen Mary Stuart, of Scotland. Depending from it, a large heart-shaped diamond rested upon the wearer's forehead. Lady Tweeddale wore a wide band of diamonds with an immense ruby, swinging slightly, in the central arch. Lady Antrim had all her family diamonds set in a crown of interlocking wreaths in which were mounted large pearls.

Lady Essex's diamond crown contained eight large single stones set among leaf-like scrolls of smaller gems. Lady Decies had on the Cartier crown of diamonds given to her by her father, George Gould, as a wedding present. Lady Denman, wife of the governor-designate of Australia, was crowned with diamond leaves. Lady Sandhurst's gems were set into triple roses, standing high in her tiara. A chaplet of diamond laurels was worn by Lady Ashby St. Ledgers

MOST TRYING ORDEAL FOR AGED ARCHBISHOP

London, June 22.—Perhaps even for King George himself the elaborate ceremonial was less of a strain than for the aged Archbishop of Canterbury. Agitated as the latter was, however, when the climax of the ceremony was reached, signs of his nervousness were not so pronounced as in the case of the venerable Archbishop Temple, who was so unstrung at King Edward's coronation that he nearly put the crown on wrong side first.

THE ROYALTIES AT CORONATION

Distinguished Guests Number Almost 1,000.

ENVOYS COME FROM ALL OVER WORLD

Many Americans Are Seen in Attendance.

Among Noted Foreign Royalties Are Crown Prince and Princess of Germany, Prince Higashi of Japan, Gackwar of Baroda, John Hays Hammond and Whitelaw Reid, of United States.

London, June 22.—Among the spectators who watched King George's coronation in Westminster Abbey were nearly 1,000 foreign royalties, special envoys from governments all over the world, ambassadors and representatives from India and the rest of the British possessions "beyondseas."

Prominent among the royalties were:

The Crown Prince and Princess of Germany, representing Kaiser Wilhelm.

Prince and Princess Henry, of Prussia, as relatives of King George.

The Archduke Karl Franz Josef, who was chosen instead of Kaiser Franz Josef's nephew and heir, the Archduke Franz Ferdinand, to represent Austria-Hungary, on account of Franz Ferdinand's refusal to be present unless official recognition were given to his morganatic wife.

The Infante Fernando of Bavaria, King Alfonso's brother-in-law, representing Spain.

The Duke d'Aosta, King Victor's cousin, representing Italy.

The Crown Prince and Princess of Denmark, representing King Frederik.

Prince Henry, Queen Wilhelmina's husband, representing Holland.

The Prince and Princess Johann George of Saxony.

Prince Yussuf Izzed Din, heir apparent to the throne of Turkey, representing the sultan.

Prince Tsai-chen, eldest son of Prince Regent Ching, representing China.

Prince Higashi Fushimi, General Nogi and Admiral Togo, representing Japan.

The Grand Duke Michael Alexandrovitch of Russia.

The Grand Duke of Mecklenburg-Strelitz.

The Duke and Duchess of Sparta.

The Prince and Princess Frederick Charles of Hesse.

John Hays Hammond and Ambassador Whitelaw Reid represented the United States. For the other great republic, France, there appeared Special Ambassador Vice Admiral de Fanque de Jonquieres, Ambassador Paul Cambon, General Count Dor de Lastours, Captain Langier and Maurice Herbette. Foreign Minister Irgens represented Norway.

Canadians Present.

The Canadians present included Lord Strathcona, Premier Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Finance Minister W. S Fielding, Navy Minister Louis Brodeur, Minister of Militia and Defense Sir Frederick Borden, Minister of Justice Sir Alan Aylesworth, Minister of Railways Graham, Conservative Leader Robert L. Borden, Senators L. G. Power, J. A. Lougheed, Robert Watson, Sir Mackenzie Bowell and J. P. Cargrain and Members of Parliament J. G. Haggart, G. E. Foster and Hugh Guthrie, of Ontario; H. B. Ames and Dr. Henri S. Boland, of Queben; J. H. Sinclair, of Nova Scotia; T. B. Carsell and Dr. J. S. Daniels, of New Brunswick; A. B. Warburton, of Prince Edward island; Ralph Smith, of British Columbia; Dr. Michael Clark and C. A. Magrath, of Alberta, and G. E. McCraney, of Saskatchewan.

Premier Sir Edward Morris, Assemblyman Bishop and the Speaker of the Assembly represented New Foundland. Premier Botha and two of his ministers represented South Africa and Sir Paul Chater and Henry Keswick, Hong Kong. The Australian representatives were High Commissioner Sir George Reid, Premier John Murray of Victoria, Premier J. McGowan of New South Wales, Premier Frank Wilson of West Australia, Commonwealth Premier Andrew Fisher and several of the latter's colleagues in the federal

BIG PARADE GAY AFFAIR

Over 1,000,000 People Throng Royal Progress.

THE MARTIAL DISPLAY IS MOST BRILLIANT

Many Nations and Creeds Are Represented.

At 9:30 Activity of Army Signalmen on Palace Roof and of Neighboring Queen Anne's Mansion Proclaim Starting of Great Procession and Marchers and Carriages Fall Rapidly into Line.

London, June 22.—An accurate estimate of the number of people who witnessed King George's coronation procession is impossible, but probably over 1,000,000 spectators were packed along the route of the royal progress.

The magnificent processional road known as the Mall, stretching from Buckingham palace to the new admiralty arch, alone contained a throng that defied enumeration, and the great expanse of Trafalgar square was black with the thousands who had braved weary hours of waiting in order to miss nothing of the spectacle.

The people came in all classes, nationalities and creeds and enormous numbers of them had taken up positions before dawn. Traffic, of course, was stopped until late afternoon. The earliest arrivals put in an appearance before midnight, provided with campstools, packages of sandwiches and other refreshments, and the majority of these made for the immediate vicinity of Buckingham palace. Here they had nothing more interesting to watch than the periodical changing of the sentries and the royal standard flapping above the roof.

Big details of police were on duty all night and prevented the hourly-increasing throng from encroaching upon the royal domain. Later in the morning, when the troops began to arrive, the patient thousands were gently, but firmly, shepherded into the positions they would be allowed to occupy, or pushed back into the Mall and Constitution hill.

Dawn was greeted by the roar of guns from Hyde park, where B. B. battery of the Royal Horse artillery had planted its field pieces, countless bugles shrilled from the temporary camps pitched in the various parks in or near the metropolitan area, and the great military machine that was to play so important a part in the day's doings was set in motion.

Brilliant Martial Display.

With the arrival of the military, who commenced taking their positions as early as 7 o'clock, the spectators had no lack of entertainment,

THE OIL WITH WHICH GEORGE IS ANNOINTED

London, June 22.—The oil with which King George was annointed was the purest distillation from the finest olives, perfumed with various balsams and spices in accordance with the prescription in Exodus XXX:23-5, as follows: Myrrh, sweet cinnamon, sweet calamus and cassia. These ingredients had been previously macerated with the oil, which was strained off some time before the coronation that it might be clear as possible.

ROYAL SALUTE OF THE BIG BRITISH GUNS IS MOST TIMELY ARRANGED

London, June 22.—The royal salute of big guns which immediately followed King George's coronation was so arranged as to be fired practically at the same moment throughout the entire British empire. The signal for it was given by a fanfare from the trumpeters in a gallery near the roof of Westminster abbey. From this gallery electric communication had been established with the general postoffice and the instant the first trumpet-note sounded the news was ticked along the line, and a second later scores of operators were flashing it all over the British isles and to the various English possessions abroad.

SPECTATORS' STANDS HAVE MARRING EFFECT UPON PROCESSIONAL ROUTE

London, June 22.—A marring effect upon the processional routes of coronation week was produced by enormous spectators' stands in front of all the churches from which the pageantry could be seen. The substitution of these unsightly, raw-board frameworks for many handsome church-fronts was not only unfortunate, but gave a disagreeable impression of commercialism to institutions which are not supposed to be commercial. Nor is this impression lessened by the belief that the proceeds from the sale of the seats will go in very small proportion into the church coffers, but will be pocketed by the rectors.

A WATER FAMINE AND ATTENDING DANGERS

ion Is Denied the Precious Fluid by an Accident.

EF WAS GIVEN FRIDAY MORNING

Two Hours After the Break in Big Main Leading to the City the Standpipe Reserve Is Exhausted and the People Face a Situation Without Parallel in the City.

By the breaking of the sixteen-nch water main in the bed of the Scioto river connecting the City Water company's pump- on with its waterworks sys- ns city, Wednesday after- .30 o'clock, Marion was li - of a water famine and is il in the event of a fire company officials claim the as caused by the big steam e backing into it, a spud strik- the pipe. This is denied by the en working on the dredge They ay the pipe was not damaged by the dredge, either by it passing over the main in the river channel or backing against it.

All night, gangs of men were employed in constructing dams to hold back the water where the break occurred. The break was covered by about fourteen feet of water. Instead of pumping the water out, when the dam against the river is completed, another channel will be made to allow the water to run off into the old river channel. Temporary completed, another channel was repairs were made with a six-inch pipe Friday morning.

Company Is Busy.

The water company's officials are bending every effort to making the necessary repairs as speedily as possible realizing the great peril the city faces and the great inconvenience resulting to every domestic water consumer, every hotel and restaurant, and to a number of manufacturing plants throughout the city depending on the company for water.

Within less than two hours following the bursting of the big main, Fire Chief Thomas J. McFarland said there was not a drop of water in the standpipe on Curley avenue.

"The pipe holds about 330,000 gallons of water, but it was kept only about two-thirds full all the time, so you see it would not take long to empty it," the chief declared. "You see we are using daily about 1,200,000 gallons of water, and it wouldn't take long to empty the standpipe.

Needed Improvement.

"What ought to be done now is to construct two water mains across the river channel. That's what has been advocated for years, and that is what I have repeatedly drawn attention to. With the single main connecting the city with the pumping station the insurance companies have long been fearful of just such a calamity as this and if another main is not now constructed our insurance rates will be boosted sky high. It behooves the people of Marion to do something for their own good. Two mains should connect the city, so that we will be all right in case anything ever happens like this again."

Chief McFarland declared that the city absolutely was at the mercy of the fire demon. The old fire cisterns are not of much avail in the event of a big fire, he added.

The Marion Steam Shovel company, the Marion Brewing & Bottling company and the Huber Manufacturing company have their own water systems and were not greatly inconvenienced. Neither was the Marion Ice & Cold Storage company affected. It has many tons of ice in cold storage.

The Break Not Unexpected.

The bursting of the huge water main was not unexpected. For weeks men have been at work in an attempt to "stretch" the pipe and lower it at the same time. This method was suggested by John W. Hill, of Cincinnati, a well-known engineer, and it was thought that it could be done and Marion would not be denied its water supply for a single hour. However, the water company officials have been fearful of a break, and there is now a question whether the break was caused by the pipe being struck by a dredge spud or whether it gave way from the terrific strain caused by the "stretching" process.

Thursday, it was not an unusual sight to see bucket brigades over the city. People were busy carrying water from the homes of those who were so fortunate to have wells.

Barber shops were among those suffering heavily from the water famine, and among the loudest in protest.

A Temporary Main.

A temporary six-inch main was laid at the pumping station and was connected with the sixteen-inch main on the east side of the river by nightfall, barring all unforseen accidents. The temporary main will give the city a water supply of 1,000,000 gallons a day, which will be ample to furnish all domestic consumers, it is announced, if they are frugal. There will be no water to waste, however.

UNHAPPY POSITION OF AN AGOSTA GROOM

Bride Rises to the Emergency and Pays the Justice.

"Well, what do you think of that?"

The bashful groom from Agosta rammed his hands in his pockets and out again.

"I've forgot my pocketbook," the man blurted out as he looked at his bride appealingly.

"That's all right, Lewis. I've got the money to pay the justice," she said. And the bride paid Justice Charles E. Gompf the marriage fee of two dollars. The marriage ceremony was performed in the justice's office, Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock. The contracting parties were Mrs. Minnie S. Smith, of Marion, and Lewis A. Hathaway, of Agosta. Both have been married before and divorced. The bride is forty years old and the groom is fifty-three.

Mr. and Mrs. Hathaway will make their future home at Agosta.

P. Manley and family, Mr. Howard Carey, Mrs. Elizabeth Schmidt, Mr. Christian Hoch, of Agosta; Mrs. P. Delauder and family, of LaRue; Mrs. Samuel Van Buskirk, of Scott Town.

All children and grandchildren were present except three grandchildren, they are Mr. Elmer Drollinger, of Idaho; Mrs. John Grigsby, of Akron, and Mrs. Grover Howell, of Illinois.

The next reunion will be held in one of the parks of Marion, June 15, 1912.

The officers elected for the coming year are Mr. David Himmeger, president, and Miss Donna Ruth Barrett, reelected secretary.

WESTERVILLE MAN HAS HOOK WORM DISEASE

Is Being Treated in Grant Hospital in Columbus.

A man suffering of what is supposed to be "pellagra," or hook worm, is at present taking treatment at the Grant hospital in Columbus This is the disease toward the fight of which John D. Rockefeller has donated millions of dollars.

The victim of the dreaded disease lives near Westerville and has been at the hospital several days. The disease is very rare in the North, but is quite prevalent in the South, especially among the poorer classes of Tennessee and Alabama. As the man spent some time in Texas not long ago it is supposed he contracted the disease in that part of the country.

The hook worm disease is characterized by an extreme lassitude, weariness and anemic condition.

OHIO ASSOCIATION OF MEXICAN WAR VETERANS

Session Is Ended at Newark—The Officers Elected.

A Newark special to the Cleveland Plain Dealer of Saturday says:

The thirty-seventh annual reunion of the Ohio Association of Mexican War veterans ended, Friday, with the selection of Covington, Miami county, as the place for holding the next reunion. Officers were elected as follows:

Flushing our waterpipe with hot water has saved us many plumber's bills, besides the inconvenience of being without water for several weeks at a time during zero weather. First close the shut-off in the cellar. Then open the faucet to let the water run back. At the same time hold under the faucet a dipper of boiling water submerging the mouth of the faucet. As the pipe empties, the hot water is sucked in and runs the length of the pipe, heating it all the way and melting the frost and ice.

Baked bananas are sometimes used as a vegetable. Peel and cut in half lengthwise. Divide if large. To each banana allow a tablespoonful of sugar, two tablespoonfuls of water, a teaspoonfull each of lemon juice and melted butter and a pinch of salt. Put slices in shallow casserole and bake slowly for half an hour, keeping them well basted.

Is Music a Neglected Pleasure in Your Home?

YOU enjoy looking at great pictures and reading good books. Wouldn't you find equal pleasure in beautiful music, if it could be brought directly into your own home?

THE AUTOPIANO
OR THE
STERLING PLAYER PIANO

Provide the Greatest of All Home Entertainment

Merely listening to fine music well rendered is pleasureable. But when, to the enjoyment of listening, is added the fascination of personally producing the music yourself, you have a form of entertainment that is irresistible.

The pleasure of the Autopiano or the Sterling Player Piano is the pleasure of conquest. Each composition that you take up, you make your very own. You play it over and over until you know the different themes and with each repetition you strive to secure a more artistic result.

The pleasure that the painter has in watching the canvas grow under his brush is yours, when you play the Autopiano or the Sterling Player Piano, for each time you play a composition, you create it anew.

Their popularity is not founded not on mere caprice, but is based upon a deep-seated need of human nature. It is the desire to do things ourselves and the pride we take in a thing well done.

The Autopiano is not merely pleasure—it is education as well — and FOR THE WHOLE FAMILY.

AN INSIGHT INTO THE ROCKEFELLER MILLIONS

The columns of the press have contained several notices of "Uncle" John D. Rockefeller arriving at Cleveland, where he makes his summer home, wearing a last season's straw hat. When we come to think of it, this seemingly trivial fact ought to be enlarged upon. A ten-dollar-a-week clerk would never have thought of such a thing. Such lack of devotion to style and custom would have ruined his standing. But "Uncle" John D could afford to wear last season's hat. The man who gives away millions with the most generous hand; and has more millions left than any other man living, is as comfortable and quite as presentable in last season's straw hat, if well cared for, as a new five-dollar hd fresh from the hatter's. And therein lies a large part of the explanation of the Rockefeller wealth. Half the world is without competence because it spends all it makes. It yields an utterly insane devotion to fashion and custom It is true of men and more true of women A million American women put aside expensive millinery at the end of the brief season for which it is specifically designed, and thereby waste of tens of millions. Men waste less because their headgear costs less, that's all The devotees of fashion never fail in their devotion, though the change is not discernable. The example of John D. ought to be widely published. We are sorry the press boys didn't tell about Mrs. Rockefeller's bonnet Perhaps it was last season's, too, but the keen-eyed reporters couldn't know it, which is no reflection on the reporters and none on the bonnet either. We suspect John D. made a large part of his many millions by leading competitors a merry dance, but the basis of the Rockefeller fortune is his frugality, and prudent economy, the avoidance of extravagance, and the everlasting turning to capital of a part of his income. It is possible for every able-bodied man to do the same thing, to a greater or less degree. Economy and saving, along with Industry, will make a capitalist of every man.

INSURGENTS ARE CLAIMING SYMPATHIES OF THE PAST

When Governor Aldrich came from Nebraska to Ohio to deliver an address, he found occasion to boast political insurgency, and proclaimed that the Man of Nazereth would be an insurgent, were he on earth today, and the great Lincoln would likewise be one, were he living in this age It is useless to discuss Lincoln. Even Democracy claims him today As a matter of fact, a greater regular never lived. It was his regularity, and his devotion to the established order that led to the civil war, and he heroically combatted insurgency which was then called rebellion, and proclaimed in phrases of liberty and a people's rights no less alluringly than insurgency of today. Lincoln believed in the government of the fathers, the insurgents of today believe the fathers to have utterly failed, and the true inspiration has come to Oregon, Kansas, Iowa and Arizona, In this later day Lincoln was a protectionist, a federalist, a unionist, a Republican always. He was so much so that Democrats lashed him with angry tongues and independents belittled, but he held his peace and clung to his purpose, and today his memory is enshrined in the hearts of men and his policies and great name are claimed by everybody But this is an old story, and our chief interest is the claim of Governor Aldrich to the likely insurgency of the Man of Galilee He came to save, not to destroy He preached motherly love never of envy and hate When one of the otes may said unto Him, "Master, speak to my brother, that he divide the inheritance with me," He replied, "Man, who made me a judge or a divider over you." And He admonished him further, "Take heed and beware of covetousness, etc" When false doctrines were proposed He said "He that speaketh of himself seeketh his own glory," which would La Follette beautifully More-over, He said, "When ye pray, use not vain repetitions, as the heathen do, for they think they shall be heard for their much speaking". And He admonished His followers "to render unto Caesar the things which are Caesar's," and "Render therefore to all their dues, tribute to whom tribute is due; custom to whom custom; fear to whom fear; honor to whom honor." Nay, more—"Let us walk honestly as in the day; not in strife and envying"

We can not say that Governor Aldrich's claim is not good; but it doesn't strike us as valid The true forebears of insurgency were the Pops of Kansas and Nebraska, with pitchforks their weapons and cheap money their heaven on earth. And they thought a revolution, attended by repudiation the means of acquiring it. Then came the awakening to prosperity, the coming of the farm to its own, and a stream of wealth swept the Pops and their false prophets away. But insurgency was proven a ladder to quick political notoriety, and the West is still full of men anxious to climb

LODGES PAY A TRIBUTE TO DEPARTED ORDERS

Knights of Pythias and Pythian Sisters of Caledonia.

FRED E. GUTHERY IS SPEAKER OF THE DAY

Graves of the Deceased Brothers and Sisters Are Decorated—The Caledonia Council Holds a Session at Which Some Matters of Business Are Given Attention.

Caledonia, June 23.—[Special.]—Calantha Lodge, No 116, Knights of Pythias, held its memorial services Sunday afternoon. The members met in the lodge room at 2 o'clock and formed a procession which was headed by the Martel band and marched to the cemetery. Here the knights, nearly 100 in number, were joined by about two score of Pythian Sisters and the decoration of graves followed. Frank Warwick acted as master of ceremonies for the knights and was assisted by F. E. Roberts as prelate. K P. Meister then introduced Fred E. Guthery, of Marion, who gave an address. To the members of the order, he gave an outline of the work expected of them, not only for the good of the order, but for the betterment of the whole human race. He said the press and the pulpit should be advised to dwell, not so much on the evils of this life as on the good that is being done. To the visitors he explained the object of the annual observance of a day set aside for honoring the departed brothers and of the good generally that is accomplished by the Knights of Pythias order.

Marriage licenses have been issued to Miss Lena Davids, of Prospect, and Marion L. Wilson, of Marion, and Miss Hattie Belle Cox, of Tully township, and Charles H. Maidens, of Morrow county.

for seemingly endless columns of troops converged upon the processional route from all over London, the sun glittering upon bright bayonets and gay uniforms, while the air was filled with the strains of martial music.

Lord Kitchener, in charge of the military part of the ceremony, was early on the scene, surrounded by his brilliant staff of generals, and was greeted with hearty cheers from the people, who, if they have not quite so warm a place for him in their hearts as for Lord Roberts, undoubtedly put "K of K" ahead when it comes to organization.

The throng was furnished with an excellent example of his genius in this direction a little later, for despite the huge army employed—there were nearly 60,000 troops either keeping the roadway clear or marching in the procession—everything went like clockwork.

Starting from barracks, temporary rest camps and railroad stations, the time table was so arranged that, when the soldiers arrived in the limited space in front of Buckingham palace, there was never the slightest trace of confusion. Cavalry, artillery and infantry followed hard upon one another's heels but no two regiments arrived at the same moment to dispute the right of priority down the Mall or Constitution hill. Each marched with unerring precision to its allotted position and dissolved into one of the long lines at either side of the route or took its place in the procession then being marshalled under the direction of the staff officers and assistants of the earl marshal and the Lord Great Chamberlain.

Every branch of the armed forces of the British empire was represented. Red was the prevailing color but, mingling with the helmeted infantry of the line, the black-busbied guards and the scarlet coated engineers and dragoons, were green coated riflemen, blue and gold artillerymen and hussars, red and blue, blue and red and blue and blue and white lancers, grey clad territorials, drab uniformed and slouch hatted colonials and the many colored uniforms and turbans of the Indian troops.

Many Lauds Represented.

Gigantic troopers of the Household cavalry, glittering in cuirasses and helmets of steels, were stationed alongside bearded Sikhs. Natty little green-coated Ghurkhas mixed with black soldiers from West Africa, hardy Canadians and Chinese police from Hong Kong and the Straits settlements.

The Canadian contingent, under Lieutenant Colonel H. H. McLean, numbered about 800 and included Canadian dragoons and hussars, mounted rifles, Canadian highlanders and rifles, grenadiers and light infantry. The men made a very smart appearance and were given a warm reception.

In the meantime, the matutinal guard mount at Buckingham palace had been put forward several hours and was gone through with unusual celerity. Barely had the old guard marched off before a guard-of-honor of sailors arrived and formed up on the right of the main gateway.

The sailors were soon followed by a second guard-of-honor drawn from the Grenadier guards—the king's own company, and not a member of which is under six feet tall. The guards arrogate to themselves the right of watching over the royal palaces and today they marched into the forecement with their band playing and in their very best style, evidently determined to show all others exactly how such duties should be performed.

Drawn up facing each other, the two groups presented a curious contrast. Even with the neater uniforms of their officers, the bronzed sailors in their loose blue suits, brown leggins and straw hats, looked very plain compared with the spick-and-span guardsmen, resplendant in scarlet and gold, white crossbelts and great black bearskin headdresses. The sailors' plain "Union Jack," too, was thrown completely into the shade by the emblazoned regimental banner borne by a young guards officer in the center of the line of bayonets.

Just before 9 o'clock detachments of the gentlemen-at-arms under their captain, Lord Denman, and the yeoman-of-the-guard under Lord Allendale, arrived, and almost immediately afterwards the royal carriages rolled into the courtyard.

Great Procession Starts.

Soon afterward, the activity of the army signalers on the palace roof and the roof of the neighboring Queen Anne's mansions, proclaimed that the procession was starting.

The procession was really divided into three parts—first, the foreign representatives and envoys; second, the British royal family; third, the king's individual procession.

The first division started from Buckingham palace at 9:30. It was headed by Colonel F. W. Kerr, of the headquarters staff, a detachment of the life guards, followed by trumpeters and a band preceding an escort from the royal horse guards. Then came the envoys in eight carriages drawn by two horses each and six drawn by four horses each.

The representative of the United States, John Hays Hammond; France's envoy, M. De Jonquires. Duke Albert of Wurtenburg and Prince Rupert of Bavaria, occupied the seventh carriage.

The carriages drawn by the four horses were on the left of the line. They were occupied by such visiting royalties as the German crown prince and princess and others of similar station.

The second divison left the palace promptly at 10 o'clock. It consisted of an escort of the Royal Horse guards and five carriage loads of members of the British Royal Horse guards, and fifive carriage loads of members of the British royal family. In the last of these were the Prince of Wales and his sister and brothers, with the exception of Prince John.

The rear guard of the escort was followed, from Marlborough gate, by the Duke of Connaught and his family and staff, also escorted by Horse guards. Just as the second division turned into the Mall, at 10:30, the thunder of guns from Hyde park announced that their majesties were leaving their palace.

An officer of the headquarters staff of the army led the way and behind came trumpeters and the advance guard of the sovereign's escort of Royal Horse guards, nodding with plumes and gleaming in steel. Then came a dozen of the king's watermen, headed by royal Bargemaster W. G. East, a quaint group of sturdy boatmen in medieval uniforms of scarlet and purple and with broad gold badges.

Next appeared four carriages conveying great officers of state, pages of honor and the ladies of the queen's retinue. Following these carriage rode the king's aides-de-camp, a brilliant group of regular army and navy, territorial, colonial and Indian officers, the latter including the Maharajas of Gwalior, Kuch-Behar, Bikanar and Idar and the Nawabs of Rampur and Sir Muhammed Aslam Khan, each a ruler of a practically independent state with from 1,000,000 to 5,000,000 subjects.

Weird Uniforms in Line.

The headquarters staff of the army came next, headed by General Sir William G. Nicholson, chief of the imperial general staff, and behind him rode the great soldiers of the realm, prominent among Field Marshals, Earl Roberts and Sir Evelyn Wood. The knight marshal's men, another weird medieval body, followed and after them marched a detachment of yeomen-of-the-guard in scarlet Tudor uniforms, blazoned back and front with the royal monogram

The king's equerries, riding four abreast, were next followed by the first of the colonial escorts, a sturdy body of Canadian cavalry, and in their rear, in turn, came escorts of Australian and South African horse. Not a few members of the latter troop used their rifles against the British ten years ago and it was characteristic of the changed condition of things to see the same unemotional Boers now bearing the identical weapons for the protection of the British king.

The dusky, turbaned troopers of the Indian cavalry came next and then, preceded by a gorgeous trumpeter in crimson and gold, came the bodyguard proper—the first division of the sovereign's escort of Royal Horse guards.

As the leading sections appeared in view gruff commands sounded which the words "royal sal could be distinguished, and as bayonetted rifles of the soldiers lined the roadway came down to "present," the regimental colors lowered to the gravel-strewn pa ment, bands struck up the nati anthem and the crowd, which already been cheering well-kn personages and the colonials, vent to the long-sustained roar enthusiasm.

Royal Coach Appears.

Behind the gleaming cuirasses waving plumes of the "blues" t rumbled an enormous, elabora decorated, picturesque old s coach through the windows of w the spectators in the foregr could occasionally catch jus glimpse of the face of the kin of the queen. Eight white ho drew the vehicle, their gold-span harnesses glittering in the light liveried and bewigged postillon strode the back of each hor scarlet coated groom walked a head of each and from the res the coach there clung a half d footmen, also magnificently liv and bewigged.

Their majesties seemed in e lent health and spirits and b constantly, to right and left, i knowledgment of their subj cheers. They wore full state r but were without their crowns the return journey from Westmi abbey.

A few yeomen-of-the-guard gentlemen-at-arms marched on e side of the coach, and on the r close to and only slightly behin door, rode Lord Kitchener. The mander of the coach's escort w the left.

HOME OF THE GREAT GUNS MADE BY KRUPP

Many Other Things Made at Works in Germany.

BIG CORPORATION OWNS MANY MINES

The Home of the Krupp Factory, Essen Is Just 100 Years Old and Population Is Nearly 200,000, Where is When Factory Starts Population Is Only 4,000.

Essen the home of the great Krupp gun works is one of the most conspicuous examples of a one man power It is practically just 100 years old In 1811 when the first Krupp furnace for casting steel was built by a poor hard working young man Frederick Krupp, the population of Essen was under 4 000

In 1911 it was 183 500, of which Krupp contingent numbered 30 000 This and a great deal more says Cassters Magazine, is chiefly the work of one man, and unparalleled in the history of industry The corporation now owns coal mines and over houses

The products from Krupp's are varied Compare this with the highly specialized condition of the industries in this country The Krupps are chiefly associated with war but in fact build all kinds of finished and unfinished materials for railroad engines tools mills and other industrial appliances are turned out in large and small quantities

The shops have been built at different dates and vary accordingly, but as a whole they possess in a marked degree that order and cleanliness which are the most distinguishing features of German factories This extends to the foundries where one usually finds dust, smoke and confusion

A specialty here is the casting of very large ingots of crucible steel It is a remarkable sight and an object lesson in German methods Ingots of eighty-five tons are cast, a feat which is not attempted in any other place The steel is melted in small crucibles, which are carried by hand and therefor contain no more than two men can lift

Scores of such crucibles go to the making of an ingot of considerable size and they occupy many furnaces which are ranged on both sides of the foundry, with the ingot mould in the center At the signal the furnaces are opened and the crucibles drawn out and seized by a small army of workmen, who run them down to the mould and pour them in

It is clear that to do the thing on a large scale perfect method in preparation and order in execution are necessary The manuever is carried out with military precision and promptness In a moment the place is aglow with the white heat of the furnace the figures run from all sides and come staggering down in pairs with the pots full of liquid steel It is a scene of intense activity but without confusion

One after another the glowing pots are emptied the molten lead runs like thick soup and plumps into the mould with a bright sputter In a few minutes it is all over, the furnaces close again the used crucibles are thrown aside and already the contents begins to congeal and change color while presently it dulls to yellows and the tint deepens as we watch The steel so made is the purest known close grained homogeneous and uniform throughout

This is not done in the United States where the impatience of hand processes which is characteristic and had led to such remarkable development of automatic machinery has a weak side The most recently built workshops at Krupp's are quite up to date in their construction —light spacious and airy, but the are no way superior to the ones in Sheffield England

The most striking feature of German iron and steel factories is their clean orderly and well kept condition The coal qualities seem to be unisersal and they extend to the dirtiest and most untidy departments no German founderies are as clean and well kept and almost as light as any other shop

In a receipt for making plasters in our medicine chest door It will be convenient in case someone may be summoned to making them has to do so

HOME-COMING WEEK AT COSHOCTON SOON

Big Affair To Be Held at Forks of the Muskingum.

THE CENTENNIAL IS TO BE CELEBRATED

Aside from Military Features the State Will Have an Agricultural Exhibit Which Is Expected to Eclipse the State Fair—A Big Week of Pleasure for Visitors

The Forks of the Muskingum was the great rallying point of the old Northwest Territory long before the colonies of the new world shook off the shackles of England It was at the Forks that the Indian tribes congregated each year for the annual hunt it was there the Delawares held their pow wows it was there that the white man stopped on his westward march it was the first pin prick on the map of the Ohio country long before there were settlements made by the invading whites

And it was there at the forks of the Muskingum that the Delaware town of Goshgachunk the long tent of Chief White Eyes was established that later became the white settlement that has since been anglicized in orthography into Coshocton

It was one hundred years April 1 that the county of Coshocton became recognized by the sovereign state of Ohio being lopped off of Muskingum county, and that one hundredth birthday anniversary is to be celebrated this month at Coshocton with a seven day merry making The week beginning Sunday June 25 has been set aside for the greatest birthday party Ohio has ever seen It is to be more than a festival It will begin with the dignity of a union thanksgiving service of all the churches in the county to be held in the court house square—thanksgiving for a hundred fruitful years—and will continue throughout the week with military and civic pageant graphic pictures of the growth of a century and a grand home coming of former sons and daughters

Not only has every citizen and former citizen of Coshocton county put his shoulder to the wheel but the State of Ohio is evidencing her interest in one of her eldest daughters by going to from $15 000 to $18 000 expense to help make one worth remembering for the next 100 years

The state cavalry will encamp at Coshocton that week coming through on horseback and arriving at Coshocton the afternoon of Saturday June 24 The celebrated troops from Cleveland Columbus and Cincinnati —the pride of the state militia—will all be there Moreover the full state hospital and state signal corps will be present for a full week as well as the famous Ninth Regiment band —the most celebrated colored musical organization in the middle west

Aside from the military features the state of Ohio will also have the largest agricultural exhibit she has ever made eclipsing even the state fair The modern way of farming the conservation of the acres instead of the waste of acreage that has marked agricultural Ohio and other middle west states in the last hundred years will be emphasized The improvement of the new over the old

The celebration is to be held in the city the central point being at the Coshocton fair grounds than which there are no more beautiful in the entire state The grounds are within the city limits and a grove of majestic oaks that would have delighted the ancient Druids makes an ideal spot for various features of the big and varied program of the week The entire city is given over to the celebration

Every street is decorated arches of electricity span the main thoroughfares by night and festoons of bunting by day

A dozen fine bands of music will play during the week and there will be parades every day Business houses are vying one with the other for the finest decorated fronts The key of the city has been suspended across the street near the railroad stations and the official glad hand not only for former residents but for all guests is already extended

A feature that is especially attractive is that there will be aeroplane flights every day between the hours of 10 a m and sunset The Centennial Commission has entered into a contract with C J Strobel the pioneer aeronaut of Toledo and he will have one of his experienced airmen in Coshocton all week The flights will be made in the big Strobel biplane It will form a graphic picture in contrast to the way the early settlers of Cosnocton county arrived on weary feet or behind plodding oxen

VILLAGE OF LARUE IS SCORCHED THURSDAY

Loss of About $9,100 Is Suffered by Fire

THE VILLAGE FIREMEN DO SOME GREAT WORK

Marion Is Asked for Assistance, but Before Relief Is Ready the Flames Are Under Control—The Entire Business Quarter Threatened for a Time—Those Who Lose

LaRue, June 16—[Special]—A fire of unknown origin starting in the barn of Charles W Rodgers of south High street, late Thursday afternoon was carried by a strong wind to surrounding buildings and before it was subdued the entire business section of the town was threatened with destruction The total loss is estimated a about $9,100

The flames spread rapidly Before they were under control the Lora Anderson Implement company's place of business including two barns and two carloads of farming machinery received Wednesday morning was burned out together with the barns of G A L Markwith Basil Ridgway, Charles W Rodgers and Miss Hattie Bailey, while the C M Tannyhill grocery the Markwith undertaking establishment Markwith's home and that of Charles W Rodgers were slightly damaged

Assistance Called

Assistance was asked of Marion but by the time the old steamer and hose wagon were loaded on Big Four cars the LaRue fire department had the flames under control

Today Mr Anderson who sustained by far the heaviest loss estimated his total loss at $5 000 He did not know whether he or the manufacturers of the farming implements would have to bear the loss of the consignment of machinery which had just been stored away

Great excitement prevailed shortly after the fire started and practically the whole town turned out to fight the flames

The big gasoline water pump was brought into play and rendered very effective work in spite of the fact that one citizen who acted as engineer became so excited in his enthusiasm for work that the pump was broken However it was speedily repaired and the good work went on

Good Work Is Done

The members of the LaRue fire department worked like Trojans and they are deserving of much credit for extinguishing the flames before much of the business section was damaged

The fire started within less than a square of the handsome new business block recently dedicated by Walter Scott Lodge No 285 Knights of Pythias

Mr Ridgway suffered the second heaviest loss His barn was totally destroyed together with some household goods that had been carried into the back yard A garden of ginseng valued at $250 was also destroyed Mr Ridgway estimates his loss at $2 500 partially covered by insurance

Mr Markwith placed his loss at $1 000 C W Rodgers at $600 and Miss Bailey at $ 00 All carried some insurance save Miss Bailey

Mr Tannyhill sustained a slight loss as a result of carrying his stock into the street The store was not burned G T Baughman whose barn adjoined that of Miss Bailey sustained a slight loss

MRS. RUTH CROMAN SEEKS DIVORCE DECREE

Wants a Divorce from William Croman.

MAKES CHARGES OF NEGLECT AND CRUELTY

Habitual Drunkenness Leads to Many Violations of Marital Contract. Couple Is Married About Thirty-One Years—Notes from the Court of Common Pleas.

After having been married thirty-one years, Ruth Croman brought an action for a divorce from William Croman, through Attorney Charles L. Justice, Friday afternoon. She charges him with habitual drunkenness, gross neglect of duty and cruelty.

The petition recites that they were married at South Bloomfield, July 20, 1879, and that eight children, all but one of whom are now of age, were born to them. She says that her husband has been drunk for eight years, and alleges that he threatened to kill her with a revolver last April, driving her from their home. By reason of "his unnatural and unhuman acts and conduct," she asks for a divorce, custody of the minory child and temporary and permanent alimony.

Judge W. E. Scofield granted a temporary injunction restraining the defendant from interfering with or molesting the plaintiff, her home and children.

Saturday, County Clerk W. W. Klinefelter received a journal entry, disclosing that Judge Daniel Babst, of Crestline, has directed Receiver Eli M. West, of the Columbus, Delaware & Marion Railway company, to return to Receivers George Whysall and Fred E. Guthery, of the Columbus, Marion & Bucyrus Railway company, four of five dump cars which were given over to the possession of West until the ownership of the cars could be determined.

The squabble between the receivers of the two roads was over five dump cars and one work car. The journal entry shows that Judge Babst has evidently determined that four of the dump cars belong to the Columbus, Marion & Bucyrus road, and that one dump car and the work car belong to the Columbus, Delaware & Marion road.

Receivers Whysall and Guthery are authorized to demand the four cars from Receiver West.

In the suit of Mary J. Cowan against Clark W. Wright and others, the defendant, through Attorneys Scofield & Durfee, has filed an answer, in which he admits the execution of the mortgage, and the suit to foreclose it, but denies each and every other allegation in the petition.

John Morral against James H. Leonard and forty-four other defendants is the title of an action filed in the common pleas court, Saturday, through Attorney Fred L. Carhart, the purpose of which is to correct certain errors made in the plat of W. W. West's first addition to the village of Larue. The plat, which is recorded in volume No. 2, page 245, of the plat records in the county recorder's office, describes the land involved as being in the "northeast corner of the southwest quarter of section twenty-eight, township five, south range thirteen, east, in Marion county, Ohio," whereas, it has been found that the land is really located in the "northeast corner of the west half of the northwest quarter," etc.

Praying that a divorce be denied the wife whom he has lived with for more than thirty years, William Croman, defendant in an action for a divorce brought by Ruth Croman, Saturday, through Attorney L. E. Myers, filed an answer. He declares the plaintiff deserted him and that he is still living at their home, No. 320 Willow street. He says that the plaintiff is now seeking to oust him and will do so, through the aid of the police, unless she be restrained. He asks that the necessary restraining order be granted. Croman is sixty years old. He valued his household goods at $100.

Peter C. Sells and other stockholders of the Miller Manufacturing company, Saturday, through Attorney Fred L. Carhart, filed in the common pleas court a petition asking that the corporation be dissolved. They say the company is "not a going concern and has not been active in manufacturing purposes for some two years."

The company was organized several years ago to manufacture kraut cutters.

Fred W. Warner was appointed master commissioner to take evidence in the case.

A reply, setting up a general denial to the answer of the defendants, was filed last Saturday, through Attorneys Jacobs & Donithen, in the suit of Morton J. Harraman against George W. Hunklin and others.

Judge Daniel Babst, of Crestline, in common pleas court, Monday, denied the New York Coal company and the Columbus Railway & Light company the right to intervene in the old receivership suit of Newton J. Carrow against the Columbus, Delaware & Marion Railway company, but allowed certain preferred stockholders, representing a big block of stock, to plead instanter. These preferred stockholders want a receiver reappointed, and have filed an answer asking that that be done to protect their interests.

The Columbus Railway & Light company and the New York Coal company oppose the reappointment of a receiver on the ground that this court has no jurisdiction in the matter after a lapse of about three years.

Judge Babst's ruling is believed to foreshadow the reappointment of a receiver for the road, which Receiver Eli M. West, of Columbus, is now operating under the jurisdiction of the Franklin county common pleas court.

Bennett Is Here.

Smith W. Bennett, of Columbus, former first assistant attorney general of Ohio, was here to hear Judge Babst's decision as to the right of the intervening petitioners to plead. He is the attorney for Receiver West. General E. B. Finley, of Bucyrus, who represents the preferred stockholders who are allowed to intervene for the reappointment of a receiver, was also present.

In his written opinion, Judge Babst declared in part:

"The question submitted is as to the right of the Columbus, Railway & Light company and the New York Coal company to intervene in this case for the purpose of denying the jurisdiction of the court and also to the right of other defendants to intervene and answer. As to the latter parties, there can be no question as to their right to be made parties upon their own application and answer. The serious question is as to the first. This question has been exhaustively argued by counsel, and we are free to confess that, with many pressing duties engaging our attention, we have not examined all of the cases cited, but have looked into sufficient of them to enable us to reach a conclusion.

Points as to Code.

"The code points out who must be parties and who may be made parties. They must have an interest adverse to the plaintiff, or such as is necessary to a determination of the question involved. Another provision provides that when the rights of the parties can not be determined without the presence of other parties, the court may order them to be brought in, etc.

"These sections construed, nevertheless, hinge upon a fact—that of interest in the issues involved. If a person has an interest he is a necessary party. In the matter before us, the Columbus Railway & Light company and the New York Coal company are not parties and their pleas do not disclose that they have an interest in the issues involved in the pending suit.

"So, manifestly, they are not necessary parties, and to intervene in a controversy between other contending parties the intervener must exhibit to the court that it is interested—has rights to protect—or an interest adverse to the plaintiff.

A Paper Filed in Case.

"The paper presented by the Columbus Railway & Light company for intervention is settled as a 'plea' and is verified. Our civil code provides what shall constitute the pleadings in civil actions. The plea presented is not a petition, neither is it an answer, nor a demurrer, and we fail to find that, in form or substance, it conforms to any of the pleadings allowed by the code. If it did, notwithstanding its designation, it could be recognized.

"The plea is a protest against this court taking jurisdiction of this cause of action, and praying relief to the defendant. If the court has jurisdiction, the protest must fail, for having jurisdiction it will not be necessary to assume or take it; and so too it must follow that if this court has jurisdiction the parties will be entitled to the relief demanded, provided of course that under the evidence they establish such right. It must be kept in mind that the intervener is not a party, and refuses to become a party, nor yet does the plea show any interest in the case, but contents itself with the statement that there is pending in another court a cause of action between the same parties involving the same questions. This plea in the opinion of the court, is not such a one as can or does raise the question of the jurisdiction of this court in the cause in question.

Some Reasons Given.

"First, because it is not such a pleading as is required by the civil code.

Second, because the party presenting the plea does not appear to have any interest in the case in which it seeks to intervene.

If we are right in our conclusions the question of jurisdiction is not before us. But, let us assume that it could be so raised, the records of this court show that in the person of another judge, this court took jurisdiction, and there is nothing of record to show that it was by its act or the acts of the parties, divested.

"We do not propose to discuss any of the many questions which have been argued by counsel, because as we regard the matter submitted we have nothing before us, other than the bare question, Shall the Columbus Railway & Light company be permitted to file its plea and so intervene?" This will be denied for the reasons given.

"We are fully cognizant of the many difficulties, expenses and hardships which may result, but this cannot be chargeable to the court. The intervener can be made a party to this cause and raise the question of jurisdiction conformably to law, and so also it may, in the manner provided by law, attack the record of this court upon which the jurisdiction now rests.

Rulings of Court.

"We wish to say that after giving the matter involved the fullest consideration, we have concluded that the evidence so far heard should not be and was not considered. That the question presented involved only the right of a person not disclosing any interest in the controversy to intervene for the sole purpose of questioning the jurisdiction of the court as to the matters involved in the original suit, and so testimony was unnecessary, and so it is that we will not, upon the present status of the case, hear further evidence."

Judge Babst also gave leave to substitute copies in lieu of the intervening petition and the answer of the Columbus, Delaware & Marion Railroad company. Leave was also given Attorney Finley, representing the intervening preferred stockholders, to withdraw temporarily the deposition of the Columbus Railway & Light company received under seal several days ago by Clerk W. W. Klinefelter and the evidence taken before Judge Babst at a former hearing.

The suit of Jane Peeling, administratrix of the estate of Maud Peeling, who was killed at the Oak street crossing of the Big Four railroad a year ago, against the Big Four, has been dismissed by Judge Daniel Babst. The case was recently settled for $2,200.

In the suit of Mary J. Cowan against Clark Wright and others, the Marion Building, Savings & Loan company has been given leave to answer by July 30.

Leave has been given the defendant to answer instanter in the civil action of Oscar M. Gotschall against the C., D. & M. In the same action the defendant company has filed a motion to secure costs for the reason that the plaintiff is a non-resident. The motion was filed by Attorneys Scofield & Durfee and Crissinger & Guthery.

William Croman, defendant in an action for a divorce brought by his wife, Ruth, Monday, was told plainly by Judge Scofield, through Croman's attorney, L. E. Myers, that his prayer for a temporary injunction restraining his wife from interfering with him when he visited his home, was dismissed. "This defendant has already been restrained from going to the home by this court and he has no business there," the court said.

Croman asked to be allowed to stay at his home and that his wife be restrained from calling an officer when he went there.

JUDGMENT IS GIVEN FOR WORK AND LABOR

Matter in the Court of Justice C. H. Conley.

A jury in the court of Justice Charles H. Conley, Monday afternoon returned a verdict for $32.70 for work and labor in favor of fourteen-year-old Paul Strine and against H. S. Scoville, residing west of the city. Young Strine worked for Scoville from July to December, 1910, and claimed he was to receive $10 a month and board or five dollars a month and board and be sent to school. Scoville claimed that he was only to pay five dollars a month and board and that the schooling was not considered in the contract. The jury was out only a few minutes.

Mrs. Josie Strine, the widowed mother of the boy, brought the action.

SPIRITED CLASH AT A MEETING SATURDAY

County Engineer Takes a Positive Stand in Matter.

ENGINEER OBJECTS TO CERTAIN PROCEDURE

Insists on Sufficient Bond Being Given Commissioners To Cover Any Damage Resulting from Back Water Caused by Work in Lowering a Water Main.

A spirited clash between attorneys representing the Marion City Water company and the Timothy Foohey Dredging company and the county commissioners marked a meeting of the commissioners, Saturday afternoon.

County Surveyor Edward S. Ault flat-footedly refused to consent to the passage of the big dredge beyond the water company's sixteen-inch main, through the bed of the stream, until a sufficient bond had been furnished the commissioners to indemnify the county for any damage resulting from backwater caused by the dam at the place where the big water main crosses the river.

"You can go down stream if you want to and finish the work all along the stream, except at the Water company's main, but I'll never O. K. another estimate on the work," declared Surveyor Ault.

The Arguments Submitted.

It was argued by Attorneys Crissinger & Guthery and John H. Bartram that the bond should be given to the county surveyor, who demanded such a guarantee. The surveyor contended that the bond should be given to the commissioners, whom he said the law authorized to sign all county contracts.

"Make your bond to the commissioners and I'll sign it with them," he said.

The outcome of all the discussion pro and con was that the Timothy Foohey Dredging company furnished a personal bond for $16,000 to guarantee that the water main would be lowered to its proper depth, and the dredge will now proceed down the river and complete the work as rapidly as possible. The water company gave a private bond to Timothy Foohey.

Dredging Delayed.

For six weeks the big dredge has not nosed its way down stream a foot, the difficult work of "stretching" and lowering the huge water main from the waterworks plant having caused delay. The main has been lowered to a depth of nine and one-half feet, but must be lowered another foot and a half. However, it has been found that this can not be done at the present time because of the existence of quicksand and the refusal of men to work at it on account of the great danger. Some other method of lowering the pipe an additional foot and a half will have to be evolved.

Engineer's Reasons.

The offset in the river, made by the main at its present depth, will, Engineer Ault declares, create a dam in the stream and cause the water to back up, carrying with it river debris in large amounts.

The bond of the dredging company guarantees that when the water company finishes lowering the pipe across the stream it will bring its great dredge back up the river and deepen and widen it at the point in dispute, and clean out all of the accumulated rubbish in addition.

Under the original contract the dredging company was to have the work done by January 1, 1912. Its president, Mr. Foohey, of Fort Wayne, Indiana, gave bond in the sum of $65,500. Saturday, the commissioners allowed the company a period of six weeks more in which to complete its contract because of the time lost at the water plant.

Falls Down Stairs.

The fichu drapery is more and more used on afternoon and evening dresses.

THE ANNUAL MEMORIAL EXERCISES OF SUNDAY

The Maccabees and Their Ladies at Reformed Church.

REV. F. E. ZECHIEL DELIVERS AN ADDRESS

Reviews the History of the Knights of the Maccabees—The Red Men Meet at Their Hall Sunday Morning—An Appropriate Memorial Tribute Is Paid the Departed.

Annual memorial exercises of the Maccabees were held at the Reformed church, Sunday morning, Rev. F. E. Zechiel, the pastor, preaching a very fine sermon. Special pews were reserved for the members of the order, and there was a large turn out, both of the Knights and Ladies of the Maccabees, who met at the Maccabee hall and marched to the church at 9:30 o'clock in the morning.

Rev. Mr. Zechiel declared in part:

"Greetings, Knights and Ladies of the Maccabees. We greet you, not only personally, but also in the name of the congregation, and bid you welcome to this place of worship for your annual service in memory of those whom you loved, but who were called from your ranks during the year. It is fitting that you should hold such a service, for love seeks expression in such a service. It is like dressing a wound—done to soothe and heal.

"It is fitting that you should hold this service in some sanctuary, as the beautiful historic narrative, upon which your order is based, was distinctively a struggle for a race of people, their homes and sanctuaries and their consciences. It is also fitting, because the manhood and womanhood you seek as members receive their moral training from the church, and the noble work your order does, in the way of protection, benevolence and friendship, are in harmony with its teachings. Our work is mutual. We could not protect as you do, because of financial reasons, and you could not teach as we do for the same reason.

The Name Maccabee.

"The name of Maccabee comes from the Hebrew 'Mac-kaw-bau,' meaning 'hammer,' and emphasizes the sledge-hammer blows delivered by Judas Maccabaeus to the oppressors of Israel. The leading figure of the entire dynasty is Judas Maccabaeus, who came upon the scene when heathens were trying to force their customs, gods and religion upon the Hebrews."

In closing, the speaker said.

"Here was the center from which radiated the knowledge of God, the law and right, for their children, and coming generations. Let us do likewise. The sanctuary is the center of a brotherhood more abiding than any other. Here we are bound to God and, in His love, to one another. Brothers of the home pass away. The warm friendship of the lodge is broken, as this service testifies. But the fellowship in Christ, in His spiritual household, in His church on earth, and in heaven, will abide."

The dead members of the order are:

Claude Drake, George F. Hecker, Elias Bean, William G. Irvin, John S. Duff, Isaac Masden, M. F. Everett, Jacob Wahl, William Vorhies, Charles Hoskins, Stephen J. Wolford and George L. McLeod.

At Red Men's Hall.

Sandusky Tribe, No. 99, Order of Red Men, held its annual memorial services in the lodge hall, Sunday morning at 9:30 o'clock. The exercises were open and there was a very large attendance.

Louis Scherff gave the address of the occasion and his remarks were fully in keeping with the observance. He spoke eloquently of the need of remembering the dead of the order. The ritualistic ceremony was carried out and Miss Helen Ford sang a solo.

Following the services, the members marched to the Marion cemetery where the graves of the dead were decorated.

The following is the roster of dead of the lodge:

DANIEL YAKE PASSES TO THE GREAT BEYOND

Hearts of Many Friends Are Touched by Sorrow.

DEATH IS THE END OF AN EXTENDED ILLNESS

Mr. Yake Is Identified with the Mercantile Interests of City a Half Century—A Kindly Gentleman and a Steadfast Friend—Brief Sketch of His Life Story.

Daniel Yake, seventy-one years old, a native of Marion county and for many years one of Marion's leading dry goods merchants, died of heart trouble, superinduced by dropsy, at his home, No. 126 Jefferson street, Tuesday morning at 5:30 o'clock.

Mr. Yake had been ill since last January. His death was not unexpected.

Daniel Yake was the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Yake, who emigrated with their two children from Germany in 1833 and settled in Richland township, this county. Mr. Yake was born on the eighty-acre homestead farm in Richland township, December 25, 1840. His father died when he was eight years old and with his mother he removed to Marion. He found his first employment with the late B. R. Durfee. In 1857, he began as a clerk for Lucas & Seffner, merchants, and worked for the firm eleven years, when he launched into business for himself, continuing in the mercantile line for forty-seven years.

Mr. Yake was married to Miss Rachel L. Bridge, daughter of the late Dr. W. W. Bridge, formerly of Marion, October 5, 1863. Mrs. Yake survives, with two children:

William W. Yake, of Charleston, West Virginia, and Mrs. Eva B. Wilson. Harry Daniel Yake, a son, died September 5, 1894.

Mr. Yake had always lived in Marion county, and was widely known. He retired from active business for himself about twelve years ago. He was a member of the Emanuel Lutheran church.

Besides the widow and children, Mr. Yake is survived by one sister, Mrs. Christina Seibert, of Marion.

Daniel Yake was a citizen most highly regarded by those who knew him best. He possessed those qualities of character which endeared him to a wide acquaintance, and in his dealings with all was ever just and fair. Charitable and kind-hearted, he was generous to a fault, and was ever ready to lend a helping hand to those oppressed by misfortune. His best memorial, his loftiest tribute, is that which is graven on the hearts of those with whom he passed a long life of usefulness and good works. Death has robbed his friends of a true friend and the community of a valued citizen. Daniel Yake came to Marion as a youth hedged by scant opportunity to frame a career. By honorable dealing, he gradually rose to an esteem in the community which his upright character and his real worth deserved. Marion will long remember Daniel Yake.

CYRUS SHADLEY IS FOUND DEAD IN CABIN

Father Finds Body After Son Is Dead Several Days.

Smashing down the door of his son's home, John Shadley, of south of Ada, last night found the rapidly decomposing form of h.. son Cyrus Shadley lying upon the floor. Nearby lay the son's dog, weak from hunger.

For several years Cyrus Shadley has lived alone in a log cabin on his father's farm. He was once at an asylum, being mentally unbalanced. Because he feared his relatives might send him back to the asylum he refused to live with them.

Fearing that something serious had happened Mr. Shadley burst in the door. There upon the floor lay his son. He was dressed and had been dead for several days. Beside him lay his dog. Relatives believe the unfortunate man died from an attack of heart trouble. Suggestion of suicide or murder are scoffed at and are given no credence.

Thursday night of last week, Mr. Shadley's father went to the cabin and tacked a note on the door asking his son to come over to his house and help pick cherries. Notes were used entirely for purposes of communication.

As Mr. Shadely did not appear his father went to the cabin, Sunday, to see what was the matter. He saw the note still on the door. The door was locked.

The funeral is being held this afternoon at the home of a sister south of Ada.—Kenton Democrat.

PECULIAR NAMES OF A COUPLE OF OHIO TOWNS

Mystery as to How Bucyrus Gets Its Name.

"When I linger more than a day or two in a town during my travels here or abroad," said Colonel W. C. Lemert, of Bucyrus, "I usually have to answer questions about the name of my home town. The name is an unusual one, and for many years very few of the home people knew just exactly where the name came from or what it meant. There is a difference of opinion to this day as to the actual derivation of the name, and the most popular explanation is that Colonel Kilbourne, who laid out the village, wanted a name that had never been used before in America. Well, he got a nonesuch, and there have been few towns in the West named for our beloved city.

"The pet tradition in Bucyrus is that Colonel Kilbourne was a great admirer of Cyrus, the Persian general, and that the town's name is really in honor of Cyrus, with the 'bu' prefixed for euphony's sake. Then there has been a discussion over the contention that the name was really that of Busirus in Egypt and the spelling was changed for no particular reason. Colonel Kilbourne, the founder, lived to see Bucyrus much of a town, and he enjoyed coming to it in the early days.

"Anyhow, Bucyrus is the one town in the state whose name is yet a puzzle, and we do not worry much about it. Years ago we had a clever citizen named D. R. Locke, who went to Toledo and became famous as an editor and author of the Petroleum V. Nasby humorous political letters. Locke lived in our section when there was an element friendly to the South before and during the civil war, and the hotbed of this sentiment was at Wingerts Corners. You recall that the Nasby letters were all dated Confedrit X Roads. That was the Nasby name for Wingerts Corners, and the Petroleum V. Nasby signature was taken from the name of Peter Vail, an old character of Bucyrus, who was noted for his sympathy for the southern slaveholders. Other characters in the Nasby letters were quickly recognized by old Bucyrus residents, who knew Locke when he was in our midst as an editor. These old Nasby letters are good reading yet, but you can not find his book in any library, and I have tried from Washington to Frisco."

"Very often residents of my home town when in Washington are asked the origin of its name," said Robert Mauck Switzer, member of congress from Gallipolis, "and it is explained that the town was laid out by a party of French emigrants in the early part of the century. They had been assured of fortune and all comforts in this land of the free, but they had rather a hard time of it at the start. They call the county Gallia and the town Gallipolis in honor of Gaul, which was divided in three parts, as we read in our Caesar during school days. Out of this French settlement grew a good town, and several descendants of the first settlers are living there today.—Cleveland Leader.

SIX LOCAL MINISTERS ARE BUCYRUS VISITORS

An Interesting Program and Banquet Enjoyed.

Six local ministers went to Bucyrus, Monday afternoon, where they were entertained by the Bucyrus Ministerial association. An interesting program was rendered at the Methodist church at that place. Rev. G. M. Rourke, of the First Presbyterian church, and Rev. J. M. Miles, of the United Brethren church, represented the local association and gave talks. In the evening, a banquet was enjoyed and a social hour followed.

The ministers in attendance from here were:

Rev. H. H. Holverstott, C. E. Buerkle, J. W. Miles, W. W. Grimes, George Wahl, George M. Rourke and Rev. Frank E. Beatty, who is here from Washington.

L. A. Kaufman, secretary of the local Y. M. C. A., accompanied the ministers.

BANDIT FOILS A DOZEN POSSES

A Lone Desperado Terrorizes Eastern Idaho.

KILLS ONE MAN AND WOUNDS FOUR OTHERS

Trail of Blood Marks Career Since Saturday.

Despite Reports That Robber's Capture Is Hourly Expected, Posses Seem No Nearer to Him Than They Were Three Days Ago—Forced To Take Stand Once, but He Escapes His Pursuers.

Salt Lake, Utah, June 20.—With one man dead and four wounded, a bandit going under the name of Harry Whitney, who, with one "pal" Saturday killed an Oregon Short Line conductor at Highbridge, Idaho, continues to terrorize Eastern Idaho. A dozen posses are trailing him, but despite reports that his capture is expected, they are apparently no nearer to him than they were three days ago.

The list of the known victims is: William Kidd, Oregon Short Line conductor, killed; Samuel Milton, deputy sheriff; Edward McGill, ranchman; Reuben Scott, member of posse, and Robert Oley, constable, wounded.

When Whitney started on his career of crime Saturday, by killing Conductor Kidd and wounding Deputy Milton on a Short Line train, he had a "pal," but the indications are that he has since killed the accomplice in order to be free to operate alone. It is supposed in some quarters that the accomplice was wounded in the original train fight, last Saturday, and that Whitney slew him in order not to be handicapped by his presence.

Although closely pursued by a dozen posses all of yesterday, Whitney managed to escape. Once he was forced to make a stand, but got away after wounding two members of the surrounding posse.

At last reports he was in the open country between Blackfoot, Idaho, and Idaho Falls.

PROSPECT FRIENDS ARE GIVEN SURPRISE

Miss Aura Vanosten and Mr. F. R. Wetzel United.

Prospect, O., June 20—(Special) It just become known here, today, that Miss Aura Vanosten, daughter of Mrs. Isabelle Vanosten of this place, was united in marriage to Mr. Ferd R. Wetsel, of Columbus, by Rev. Sherman Divine at the Woodard Avenue Presbyterian church, of Detroit, Michigan, last Sunday evening.

Mrs. Wetsel, who as a bookkeeper working in Columbus several years, met her husband in that city, where he is employed as a traveling salesman for the Issac Ebberly company.

The young people will make their future home in the Capital City.

BIG STEAM DREDGE IS AGAIN WORKING

Making an Effort To Regain Much Lost Time.

The big steam dredge of the Timothy Foohey Dredging company passed over the Marion City Water company's main in the Little Sciote river, early Tuesday and is now nosing down stream.

"After its six weeks' rest the old girl appears to be in better shape than ever and is making every effort to make up for lost time," declared County Surveyor Edward S. Ault. "I don't know much about steam dredges, but the men say they work fine after they rest awhile. I guess they are like razors—lay 'em aside, forget 'em awhile, then use 'em and they cut out of sight."

HENRY SCHMULBACH VICTIM OF ROBBERY

Relieved of $160 and Two Tickets to Wheeling.

Henry Schmulbach, of Wheeling, West Virginia, was the victim of three pickpockets who robbed him as he was entering the chair car of a Hocking Valley train enroute south Monday afternoon.

Mr. Schmulbach came here to accompany his invalid sister home. She has been a patient at the Dr. C. E. Sawyer sanatorium. When purchasing tickets at the union station Mr. Schmulbach inadvertently exposed his billbook containing $160 in the presence of three well-dressed fellows standing near. When he was entering the chair car of the train, the three fellows crowded him in the narrow entrance and without his knowledge secured the billbook and its contents to which had been added a couple of tickets to Wheeling.

As the train was moving out, the trio of crooks made an excuse that they were on the wrong train and jumped off. They probably caught the next train out of the city.

The victim of the robbery did not discover his loss until he reached Owens and the conductor called for tickets.

WARRANT IS ISSUED FOR WILLIAM MAY

Local Bricklayer Charged with Non-Support.

A warrant has been issued for William May, a bricklayer employed at Marion, charging him with non-support of his three children, who are now at the Children's home, while the wife is at the Jane M. Case hospital, as a result of her work to support these children, the officers say.

Detective Matthews stated, Monday morning, that May has had steady work at sixty-five cents an hour, but that he has been very miserly toward his family, two weeks ago Saturday giving his wife eighty cents, two quarts of beans and a loaf of bread, to support the family the ensuing week. Saturday a week ago, the officer alleges, he sent his wife thirty cents and about one dollar's worth of groceries. Saturday, after he knew a warrant had been taken out, he sent Mrs. May seven dollars and is making promises to be good. The officers have not yet decided as to further action.—Delaware Gazette.

JUDGE DENIES PACKERS' PLEA

Indicted Beef Barons Must Go to Trial.

THE DECISION IS UNEXPECTED BLOW

Packers Looked for Freedom from Prosecution.

Meat Men Thought Supreme Court Decision in Oil and Tobacco Trust Cases with Reference to "Reasonable" and "Unreasonable" Clauses Would Be Sufficient To Cover Their Case.

Chicago, June 19.—Federal Judge Carpenter today denied the motion of the ten indicted packers for a rehearing on their demurrer to the federal indictments charging them with criminal conspiracy in restraint of trade. There is no appeal from the order and the packers will have to go to trial.

The decision of Judge Carpenter is an unexpected blow to the packers who thought the supreme court decision in the Standard Oil and Tobacco trust cases would free them from criminal prosecution.

Judge Carpenter gave no reason for overruling the motion, merely declaring, in a six-word opinion, that the motion was denied.

When the packers were indicted they demurred, setting up that the government's charges were too vague and indefinite. Judge Carpenter denied this demurrer.

Immediately after the important trust case decisions to attorneys for the packers demanded a rehearing on the demurrers, declaring the "reasonable" and "unreasonable" clauses in the highest court's decision over their cases and that under these decisions the packers need not go to trial. This motion today was denied.

The government gave notice that it would move for an immediate trial.

MARION MEN CALLED IN THE DIEGLE TRIAL

They Were Used as Character Witnesses for Defense.

THE LOCAL MEN APPEARED WEDNESDAY

The Trial of Diegle Is Begun in the Criminal Branch of the Franklin County Common Pleas Court Tuesday—Trial of James Ross Is Postponed Tuesday.

Former Circuit Judge Caleb H. Norris, Common Pleas Judge William E. Scofield, former Congressman Grant E. Mouser and former Prosecuting Attorney D. R. Crissinger, of this city, and Senator R. H. Finefrock, of Prospect, were used as character witnesses for the defense in the trial of a former Marionite, Rodney J. Diegle, senate sergeant-at-arms, in Columbus, who is charged with aiding Senator L. R. Andrews in soliciting a bribe from F. S. Harrison, a Burns detective.

Tuesday morning, Sheriff John G. Stark received from the Columbus authorities subpoenas for the Marion county men, who were commanded to appear in the criminal branch of the Franklin county common pleas court, Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock. Deputy Sheriff Cornelius Breen served them with the papers Tuesday.

The trial of Diegle began, Tuesday morning, and it is expected that it will continue several days. Attorney Belcher, of Columbus, who defended Representative Nye, and Jack Eagen, of Dayton, are among Diegle's attorneys.

The trial of James Ross, Columbus Democratic political leader, who is charged with giving a $100 bribe to former County Commissioner Joseph Gillespie, of this county, has been postponed. It was to have begun in Columbus Tuesday. Ross was indicted a year ago following a legislative statehouse probe for the alleged bribing of Gillespie to influence purchases from the Ruggles-Gales company, of which Ross was president.

OHIO MANUFACTURERS WILL PUT UP A FIGHT

They Object to Enforcement of the Green Law.

Columbus, O., June 19.—Daniel J. Ryan and other members of a committee representing the Ohio Association of Manufacturers contended to Attorney General Hogan that the new Green law limiting the hours of employment of women and girls to 54 a week and not more than 10 a day, is unconstitutional, and asked that he give a ruling on it. They also asked that State Shop Inspector Kearns be requested to hold up the enforcement of the law pending the outcome of the ruling. Attorney General Hogan will pass upon the law and meanwhile the enforcement of it will remain suspended.

ST. MARY'S SCHOOLS GRADUATE FINE CLASS

Young Men and Women Enter Life's Responsibilities.

CHURCH THE SCENE OF A PLEASANT AFFAIR

The Patrons and Friends of St. Mary's Parochial Schools Enjoy an Evening of Music and a Fine Address by Father Schwartner. Some Sound Thoughts in Oration.

Every one of the hundreds who attended the annual commencement exercises of St. Marys schools held in magnificent St. Mary's church, Tuesday night, was deeply impressed with the music of a choir of seventy-five voices, composed of the school children, and the Philharmonic orchestra, under the direction of Dr. Robert Ramroth.

The doctor is well and favorably known as a violinist and pianist, and last night he demonstrated that he is also a musical director of unusual ability.

Besides the wonderful music, Rev. Father August T. Schwartner, of Lima, delivered an able address to the twenty graduates, twelve girls and eight boys. It was brief, but it bristled with needful information. His voice was silvery, and possessed a soothing charm.

A Large Gathering.

The night was auspicious. Many prominent citizens were there. A conservative estimate places the attendance at 800 But mere numbers can not describe the crowd. There were people in all walks of life. Young people predominated.

Youths and maidens filtered down the aisles in search of seats smiling and nodding happily. Staid old married folk looked on with a brave show of dignity

Through it all were wee frolicking toddlers, and they, too, were charmed by the music, for not even a peep escaped them.

Dr. Ramroth selected a program of exceptional merit. The orchestra, members of the well-known Philharmonic organization, was of good proportions, the instrumentation being carefully arranged.

Big School Choir.

The big school choir, however, was particularly pleasing, and was the feature of the program, which was most judiciously made up, including only music that was musical and understandable by the large audience, and still it was of a high order.

One of the best numbers of the evening was Strauss' "Away to the Woods," and brought into prominence the excellence of the choir, which had been trained by Dr. Ramroth less than three weeks. Another exceptional number was Vealzie's Revel of the Leaves,' and still another was Schuman's "Gypsy Life."

Mrs. Cornelius Breen, Miss Parrechie and Mr. Gus Ramroth sang Weigand's "Ave Maria" very impressively, brilliant technique and beautiful tone being displayed.

Speaker of Evening.

Father Schwartner was not introduced, except by the program. He walked from the first row of pews to the improvised stage, on which the graduates were seated. Slowly he began his short, though interesting address. A large and handsome man, his personality immediately became impressive. He told the story of the great Grecian general who had advanced with his army through a valley. When the army was halted for the night the general told his soldiers that they would find pebbles for their cross-bows, but added:

"Those of you who pick up the pebbles and place them in your pouches will be sorry and those of you who do not fill your pouches will be sorrier still."

Many of the soldiers filled their pouches, others failed to gather any of the stones, while others half filled their pouches. Then the order was given to march again, and the great army passed out of the enemies' country as the sun was rising. It was then discovered by the soldiers that what their general said was true. Those who had filled their pouches with the supposed pebbles found that they were nuggets of gold and they were sorry that they had not gathered more Those who had gathered only enough to half fill them pouches were sorrier still.

Prediction is True.

After the soldiers had been given the order to march, many had thrown away the supposed pebbles and they were also sorry And so it was what the old general had predicted came true.

"Even nowadays in the battle of life, there are those who take none of the golden opportunities as they pass through school, where there are the golden nuggets of opportunity," declared Father Schwartner. "It will be that they idled away their time and the time of their teachers. They were indolent scholars.

"And others there are who perhaps have not had the advantages of a good schooling in their youth, yet we have gathered the golden nuggets of opportunity. Some of you, perhaps, could not. Those of you who lived fifty years ago did not have the advantages that we have today. Schoolhouses were few and far between, and even with the best of a schooling you could not gather the nuggets as they can be gathered today. You are more to be pitied than to be blamed.

"There are some parents who do not realize what an eduaction is. There are some who, because they did not procure an education in their youth and got along very well, think their children ought not to be any better educated. They worked hard, yet they suceeded, and they think their children should do the same. This is dishonest. Would you maim or cripple your child, dwarf his mentality, then send him out into the world? No, you would not. Then you are doing him a greater injustice by taking him out of school and putting him into some dirty factory, selling his life blood and future success for the few pennies he earns.

Battle of Life.

"Still we find some going through the battle of life and taking none of the nuggets of opportunity. Some pick them up only to throw them away after they go through school.

"One of the great pities is found in those who do not know how to make good use of a good education. They threw away their advantages. Some perhaps have not found the proper station in life. They are round pegs in square holes, and can not succeed. They are misfits out of plate.

"Some of those who receive good educations make bad use of their education. Go into the reformatories and penitentiaries and the majority of the criminals found there are educated. They made bad use of their education. Our penal institutions are filled with educated criminals.

"Science without morality, learning without religion, a bark without a sail.

Remember Principles.

"I hope these young graduates as they pass out into the battle of life will not forget the principles they have learned when they leave their alma mater. The hope of your church and your school is that you succeed honorably. We respect our school more than we do other schools because of its religious training and influences. We do not expect you to become merely drawers of water and hewers of wood. We expect you to be leaders. Your church and your school and your parents and friends expect you to be successes in life You are graduated from your parochial school, you will apply those principles you have learned up to this time. Always reflect honor upon your church and your school.

"Go out into the world and be a credit to those who sent you out. Even though the skies be dark, when the morning breaks and the sun shines, I hope you'll find the golden nuggets in your pouches like the Grecian soldiers who did not throw away their golden opportunities

Gold Medals Presented.

Father Joseph Denning, who worked so hard to make the commencement the big success it was, presented gold medals to Eleanor L. Donovan, Clara M. Hocter and William Shea. They carried away the class honors.

Scholars who received books as a token of perfect attendance during the year were Margaret M. Lawler, Regina Curran, Genevieve M. Sullivan and Harry Fye.

The scene was impressive when the entire audience kneeled and Mrs. Cornelius Breen and Mr. Jules Martin sang "O Salutaris," as incense was burned. The same scene was repeated when a double quintet sang, "Tantum Ergo." The quartet was composed of Jules Martin, George Andres, Stephen Werley, Richard Wissler, Charles Werley, Edward Salisbury, Joseph Kaupp, Garfield Irvin and Robert Ramroth.

Miss Nona Kelly played the piano accompaniment for all of the numbers on the program, and displayed her extraordinary talent to good advantage.

As Father Denning called the names of the graduates they stepped forward one at a time and received their diplomas, tied with the class colors, purple and white for the scientific and red and gray for the commercial. Each graduate was greeted by applause

The Graduates.

The church was beautifully decorated. The main altar was bedecked with red roses, and the altars of St. Joseph and St. Mary were decorated with carnations. With the myriads of candles burning, the decorations presented a brilliant sight The graduates are Scientific Course—Gertrude D. Cusack, Dorothy I. Curran, Marie V. DeHaven, Emil E. Edmondson, Clara M Hocter, Patrick F. Kelly, Loretto A. Murphy, Mary M. Navin and Edward I. Salisbury.

Commercial Course—Eleanor L. Donavan, Margaret M. Lauler, John P. McAndrew, Clarence L. McClory, Robert J. Miller, Marie F. Masterson, William J. Ochs, Mary M. Rafferty, Genevieve M. Sullivan, William Shea and Catherine Von Raenel.

Among the visiting priests were Fathers Falls and Feldman, of Cincinnati; Father Highland, of Eaton; Fathers Kuebler and Creehan, of Celby, and Father Kayes, of Galion.

MR. PATRICK MONAHAN WINS MANSFIELD BRIDE

Is Married to Miss Cunningham Wednesday Morning.

Mr Patrick Monahan, formerly of this city, but at present chief clerk in the attorney general's office in Columbus, was married at Mansfield, Wednesday at 8 o'clock, to Miss Mary Cunningham, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Cunningham, of that city.

The ceremony was performed in St. Peter's Catholic church by Rev. Father F. A. Schreiber and was witnessed by nearly 100 of the friends and relatives of the young people. Miss Nellie Cunningham, a sister of the bride, was bridesmaid and Mr. Clement Kelly, of this city, an intimate friend of the groom, was best man.

A wedding breakfast followed the ceremony at the church

CLASS OF THIRTEEN FINISHES ITS WORK

Patterson Commencement Is Held in LaRue Church.

A LARGE AUDIENCE ENJOYS THE PROGRAM

Each Graduate Contributes to the Exercises and Rev. W. A. Ferguson Delivers the Class Oration—Many Useful Hints Given as to "Expression"—List of Graduates.

LaRue, O., June 21.—[Special.]—The Patterson commencement exercises were held in the Presbyterian church, Tuesday evening, and were largely attended by the relatives and friends of the thirteen graduates

The church was decorated in flowers and ferns and presented a very pretty scene The exercises were very good, and those taking part did exceptionally well.

The program was opened with a selection by Marsh's band, after which an invocation was pronounced by Rev. W. A. Ferguson, pastor of the church.

Various Numbers.

Grace Spicer gave a splendid recitation on, "The Man Who Wins," and Marie Jones read an instructive essay on, "Self Confidence." James Lyons then gave a recitation which was well delivered. Following another selection by the band Marguerite Kramp contributed a splendid oration entitled, "Foundation Upon Which We Build." After an ably-rendered recitation, "General Wheeler at Santiago," by William Raub, Mrs Floyd Terry and Mrs. William Clarke favored the audience with a focal duet.

Nina Riley read an essay on "North American Indians," which was very well prepared, and Damon Parker recited a pleasing selection entitled, "If." A fine essay on "Mark Twain," by Rita Hoagland, was followed by Miss Blanche Hinklin, who amused the audience by reciting "The Inventor's Wife."

The Class Address.

Following another selection by the band, Carrie Hastings gave a recitation, "For the Slumber Island—Ho," and Virgie Hensell read an essay on "Sir Walter Scott." Nellie Winslow contributed a recitation entitled, "Prosperity and Cooperation," and then another amusing recitation was given by Edward Randall, "Sermon Time."

Spear Hastings sang a solo, after which the class address was delivered by Rev. W. A. Ferguson.

After congratulating the members of the class on their ability to successfully pass the examinations required, and on being from the rural districts, he delivered a splendid address an "Expression" He gave many illustrations of how human thoughts should be expressed and how voices should be cultivated

The speaker closed by reciting a poem entitled, "Hello!" It was a good example of what a difference it makes in a person by greeting another with a fond "Hello," or a "How-do-you-do."

After another selection by the band, Rev. Mr. Ferguson pronounced the benediction.

NEW RECEIVER WANTED FOR THE C., D. & M. ROAD

Answer and Cross-Petition Is Filed Wednesday.

SOME CLAIMS MADE IN CROSS-PETITION

The Petitioners Seek To Have the C., D. & M. Company's Affairs Settled and the Property Sold—Various Proceedings in the Local Court of Common Pleas.

The now famous answer and cross-petition in the receivership suit of Newton J. Carrow against the Columbus, Delaware & Marion Railway company was filed in the common pleas court, Wednesday, by Attorneys Finley & Gallinger, of Bucyrus, and Guy M. Walker, of New York, counsel for cross-petitioners A. E. McBee, Robert W Bingham and Samuel Castleman, of New York City.

Messrs. McBee, Bingham and Castleman say they are holders of preferred stock in the railway company and that they are agents and attorneys in fact of holders of the preferred stock of the defendant company to the amount of 4,300 shares, and they have been duly constituted a committee with the legal title to all preferred stock and empowered to take such legal action as they see fit.

It is further set up that the company's property is subject to a mortgage, or deed of trust, to secure $2,500,000 of bonds and that the authorized capital of the company amounts to $3,000,000 divided into $900,000 of preferred stock and $2,100,000 of common They assert that the defendant corporation has defaulted in its interest on the bonds, and that it is now without funds to meet and pay the interest. Besides, they claim, the company owes and is indebted to persons in large amounts. They further claim that the plaintiff, Newton J. Catrow, and Attorney Oscar M. Gottschall, as officers and directors of the company, are attempting to control the action of the company and to prevent a sufficient answer being made to the plaintiff's claim, and at the same time attempting to prevent the defendant company from making a sufficient defense to his action.

Messrs. McBee, Bingham and Castleman specifically deny that the defendant company is indebted to Newton J. Catrow in any sum or that he is the holder of the promissory note of the defendant company, described in his petition, and declare the note was not delivered to President. John G. Webb, as collateral security for any loan in any sum whatsoever.

In their cross-petition, the New Yorkers ask for the appointment of a receiver for the road and for the court to instruct the receiver to contest and defend the claims made against the property, and particularly do they ask to be permitted to defend against any claim made by Catrow, himself an officer and director of the company, which claim is being prosecuted against the company in his behalf by the road's vice president, Oscar M. Gottschall; that the stockholders of the railway may not have their property taken from them upon false and unjust claims made by the officers and directors, and for an order marshalling the assets of the company

It is further prayed that a master be appointed and a time set for the proving of claims against the defendant company, and that upon final hearing the property of the railway shall be ordered sold for the payment of valid claims proved against it.

The civil action of Lewis Tron against the C. C. C & St. L. Railroad company has been settled, costs paid and record waived

The demurrer to the first amended petition has been sustained in the civil action of Lucinda Miller against Susanna Conklin The defendant demurred on the ground that the plaintiff's petition contained a defect in a party defendant and that it did not set up sufficient facts to constitute a cause of action.

The first amended petition was filed July 23, 1910, and asked that a certain deed conveying sixty-seven acres in Waldo township to Susan Conklin from Catherine Plank, deceased, be adjudged fraudulent and void and set aside

A motion to set aside and vacate a judgment by default and for an injunction restraining the plaintiff from enjoining the enforcement of the judgment of $61.90, has been overruled by Judge W E. Scofield in the suit of the Toledo Computing Scales company against William G. Mautz. Attorneys DeGolley & DeGolley, representing the defendant, demanded a jury trial, which the court refused. Mautz formerly conducted a meat shop at Main and Church streets.

In the damage suit of Ethel May Hoye, an infant, against the Big Four Railroad company, the plaintiff has been given leave to plead by July 31

"Finding for the defendant on the facts as to the claim of the plaintiff," is the entry made by Judge Scofield in the suit of the Union Loan & Security company against Isaac Furniss, a civil action. The petition is dismissed without prejudice to the rights of the cross-petitioners, and judgment is made against the plaintiff for costs incident to a hearing upon his claim A finding is also made on the answer and cross-petition of the International Harvester company. The finding was for the company.

A motion for a new trial has been overruled by Judge Scofield in the suit of Thomas Hart against Ignatz Bender. The plaintiff sought damages for injuries sustained in falling down stairs

Leave has been given the defendant to plead by July 18 in the suit of Charles G. Avers against the Prospect Oil & Gas company

---

On the motion of S. H. DeLong in the suit of Francis M Baldwin against Henry Snyder, S. H. DeLong, trustee in bankruptcy for F. M. Baldwin has been substituted as plaintiff

---

Wednesday morning, in common pleas court, through Attorneys Eymon & Thompson, the Pennsylvania Railroad company brought an action to enjoin Irvin N. Hill from emptying a pool of filthy water and offensive material from a slaughterhouse on the company's land south of the city. A temporary injunction was granted The Pennsylvania claims that an acre of its ground has been covered with filthy matter, in some places a foot deep. It is further claimed that the defendant Hill ignored a notice of the township health officer to eradicate the nuisance.

Judge Scofield, Tuesday morning, granted Lulu Stevens a decree of divorce, awarded her $500 alimony and restored her to her maiden name of Fallett The plaintiff testified that the defendant, Wilmer Stevens, beat her and failed to provide for her. She related that one night her husband came home with some wine and hard cider, and because she refused to drink any, he knocked her down and broke up the dishes.

The plaintiff was married to the defendant, May 20, 1902, and started her action for divorce, April 18, 1911.

A transcript of the case of the state of Ohio against James E Haycock, who was held to the grand jury for attempted criminal asault, by Mayor Seiter, has been filed in the common pleas court. Haycock is at liberty on $200 bond.

FRANK HARVEY IS TAKEN TO CLEVELAND TUESDAY

Goes to Forest City on Promise of His Wife.

LODGED IN JAIL BUT IS LATER RELEASED

Harvey Has Much Trouble with His Wife and Declares He Is Afraid She Will Kill Him—Unsuccessful Effort To Get Harvey Out of the County Secretly.

Tuesday afternoon, a deputy sheriff from Cleveland came to Marion county and arrested Frank Harvey, who had been working for Charles Ramer, south of the city. The warrant charged him with non-support

Clay Harvey, of north State street, a brother of the prisoner, saw Attorneys Mouser & Moloney with a view to obtaining his brother's liberty When all the necessary papers were made out in a habeas corpus proceeding and the attorneys were in the act of calling by telephone County Clerk W. W Klinefelter, the prisoner agreed to return to Cleveland, after holding a long-distance telephone conversation with his wife According to Attorneys Mouser & Moloney, the wife agreed to dismiss the the action and give him half an interest in her property in the Forest City if he would return to her. This Harvey agreed to and returned with the officer.

Lodged in Jail.

When Harvey reached Cleveland, however, he was placed in jail, but was later released and went to his wife Wednesday.

Great secrecy was attempted by the Cleveland officer in the arrest of Harvey. An unsuccessful attempt was made to get him out of the county before any of his friends learned of his predicament

It will be remembered that, several months ago, Mrs. Harvey came here from Cleveland and, accompanied by an officer, visited her husband, who was staying with a sister north of the city She begged him to return to her, but he refused to do so, declaring he was afraid of her. Harvey told the officer that he feared the woman would kill him

"I don't know much about his wife," said Mrs. Clay Harvey Wednesday. "All I know about her is that she had been married once before when he married her."

LOOKS NATTY IN HIS NEW SERVICE UNIFORM

Ross Runyan Greeting His Friends After Long Absence.

HE SERVES FOUR YEARS IN THE MARINE CORPS

Gains Credit for Seven Years of Service by Passing Much of His Time in the Philippine Islands—Will Return Soon for Another Period of Four Years—Likes Duties.

Ross Runyan, who has many friends throughout the city, returned home, Tuesday night, after an absence of four years, the period of an enlistment in the marine corps. He was up bright and early Wednesday morning, to greet his friends, and they found him making a fine appearance in his new blue uniform, trimmed with red.

Runyan had little to say relative to his experience while in the service, but says that the water surely agrees with him and that he intends re-enlisting for another term of four years. He spent six months on the cruiser, California. While on the cruiser he visited China, Japan, Honolulu, Mexico, northern Alaska and the Philippine Islands, spending about three and a half years on the islands. For the island service he is rewarded with double time and for the four years of service he has seven years of service to his credit.

While in foreign lands Runyan always looked forward to receiving news from home and kept well posted as to what was transpiring here. While he failed to see a city that looked so good to him as Marion, he says he would never be contented out of the service and will return in about two weeks. He hopes to be able to get on a boat that will spend most of the time off the Alaskan coast, and will re-enter the service as a non-commissioned officer. While in the Philippines he could have secured the appointment of corporal, but declined. He is a great baseball fan and, being very much interested in the local club, expects to take in all the games while he is here.

One may say that every style of coiffure is fashionable and with equal truth add "ornaments as well." No matter how the hair is arranged there is worn on the head a mass of curls, puffs, braids, etc., and some dainty bit of shell, gold, silver, semi-precious jewels, beads, ribbon, flowers, chiffon, etc.

When coating chocolate creams the melted chocolate often becomes curdled. To remedy this add a little olive oil.

When the children's books have become soiled the pages can be cleaned by rubbing with powdered pumice stone.

Chicken salad served in green pepper shells not only is attractive, but the season from the pepper is very pleasing.

HORSE SALE

At Beaver's Barn, Prospect, O.

JUNE 25, 1911.

20 IOWA HORSES 20

Harvest Horses, Farm Chunks, Feeders and Brood Mares.

Personally selected in the country. There have been a great many horses shipped to the markets this year and not many brought in from the West, and good marketable horses are scarcer now than they have been in five years. Horses fed for the fall market are sure money makers.

Buy them now and feed them on grass. I shipped 389 horses east since January 1st, and have only sold 60 horses from the West.

Prospects for a big fall market look good and I expect to be in the game.

Don't miss this sale. This sale begins at 1 o'clock. Terms same as usual.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

Fill a little cheesecloth bag with chopped ice and give it to the baby when cutting teeth.

In serving hominy for breakfast, just before taking from the stove, add a beaten egg

Meringue used instead of pie crust as the covering of an apple pie is somewhat of a change.

A teaspoonful of glycerine added to the rinsing water makes the flannels come out like new.

Time and often money are saved by the use of ready-made clothes driers now on the market.

Use the ordinary tongs that come with boxes of candy for plucking the hulls from strawberries.

A white felt hat can be beautifully cleaned with the soft inner part of a stale loaf of wheat bread.

When next making lemon jelly add a few cloves to the mixture. The seasoning will be a pleasing addition and getting them out of the crowd. A number of women were lifted bodily and passed along over the heads of the throng.

The second section started at 10 o'clock and the third, in which their majesties rode, at 10.28. A small army of detectives, ostensibly mere spectators, kept pace with the royal carriage, signaling to other detectives in the stands, who in turn telephoned to Scotland Yard the progress of the royal carriage and all the surrounding conditions. In this way Scotland Yard was kept in touch with the king and queen from the palace to the Abbey.

The sky was slightly overcast and occasional sprinkles tended to mar the brilliancy of the occasion.

Crowned Amid Pomp.

[By Charles P. Stewart, London Correspondent of the United Press.]

London, June 22.—George V. and Mary III were crowned today king and queen of "the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and of the British dominions beyond the seas."

To the orthodoxly-minded the ceremony was an awe-inspiring display of the pomp of militarism, of ecclesiastical solemnity and of medieval magnificence. To the cynic it was an almost pathetically childish exhibition of delight in tinsel and spangles. The radical saw in it a positively wicked waste of millions, in a country where fully one-third of the population is on the brink of pauperization and one-twentieth is literally starving.

The average Briton is strictly orthodox, however. Before dawn the people began swarming by hundreds of thousands into the streets through which the royal procession was to pass, between Buckingham palace and Westminster Abbey. The foot and mounted police who shepherded them seemed numberless. Lining the thoroughfares or marching in the procession were 65,000 soldiers under command of Field Marshal Viscount Kitchener. To some extent the tremendous military display was, indeed, necessitated by the shortness of the route and the consequent congestion of the crowd to an extent which, orderly as Londoners usually are, would have rendered the ordinary "thin red line" powerless to control it.

Immediately the Abbey doors were opened, hours before the actual ceremony, those privileged persons possessing tickets of admission began taking their seats, and as the ancient edifice filled, the eye was dazzled by the sparkling of the women's jewels and the brilliance of the uniforms worn by the men.

Thousands in Abbey.

Some 7,000 were admitted in all, including forty members of the royal family and relations, more than 200 foreign princes, princesses and special representatives from every civilized country in the world, 1,420 peers and peeresses, 300 bishops, clergy, statesmen and ambassadors, 900 members of parliament with their wives and 800 representatives from India and the British colonies.

Peers and peeresses were in full robes of scarlet and ermine and carried their coronets ready to put on the moment the crown was placed upon King George's head. Coronets, gems, chains, orders and medals scintillated in the subdued light and showed up even more plainly beside the occasional plainer costume of some one of less exalted rank than the nobility on the outskirts of the group of higher aristocrats.

Bishops in crimson and lawn, high court judges in scarlet and ermine and full-bottomed wigs, law lords in black and gold, army and navy officers in red, blue, green, black and grey, cabinet ministers in blue, white and gold, members of parliament in black court dress, foreign officers in weird and wonderful colors, eastern potentates in flowing robes and turbans of every hue and shade under the sun made up the balance of the gorgeous assembly.

The royalties occupied a row of specially-constructed boxes in front of which were stationed long lines of scarlet-coated, black busbied grenadiers, alternating with yeomen of the guard in Tudor uniforms of scarlet and gold.

The thrones were placed in the "theater" or space in front of the altar, at the junction of the choir, trancepts and communion enclosure. The floor, which had been raised, was covered by the magnificent coronation carpet of blue and gold, emblazoned with the royal arms and the emblems of England, Scotland, Ireland, Wales and the colonies. The king's throne was elevated upon a dais and approached by five steps, while the queen's, placed alongside, was slightly lower, with only two steps.

Between the thrones and the altar was "St. Edward's chair," the venerable piece of furniture in which every king of England has been crowned since the days of Edward the Confessor. Beneath it is the legendary "Stone of Scone," upon which the ancient kings of Scotland were crowned until Edward I captured it and brought it back to England with him. Nearer to the altar, at one side of the "theater," were the two "chairs of recognition," for the convenience of the king and queen before the start of the ceremony.

Arrival of Regalia.

The first sign of real business was the arrival of the regalia and crown jewels, carried in by the canons and chaplains from the Jerusalem chamber, whither they were brought last night from the "Tower of London." The canons and chaplains having passed, to the solemn chanting of Tallis' litany, a long column of surpliced choristers took up their positions and the service commenced with a triumphal march by an orchestra and choir of 8500, under Sir Frederick Bridge's direction.

At 10 o'clock the full pomp of the ecclesiastical procession was formed for the purpose of carrying the regalia to the vestibule to await their majesties' arrival. To the strains of "O God Our Help in Ages Past," the march down the aisles began and as the clergy, led by the Bishop of London in flaming scarlet, disappeared through the western doors, the way was prepared for the royal procession's entry.

The thunder of drums outside announced the principal actors' arrival shortly before 11.

First came the foreign princes and princesses, in wonderful robes in which the royal purple predominated, by their long court trains borne by pages and their coronets carried on silken cushions before them.

The Duke of Connaught, brother of the late King Edward and uncle of the present monarch, in the full uniform of a field marshal under his royal robes, took his seat as a royal duke in front of the benches reserved for the highest of British noblemen. At King Edward's coronation the seats of the royal dukes had three occupants, the Dukes of Cambridge, Connaught and Cornwall and York. Today Connaught was left in solitary splendor. His uncle, the Duke of Cambridge, is dead. The Duke of Cornwall and York has risen to the throne, as King George V. And the Prince of Wales, though now the wearer of his father's former titles, is not yet of age and cannot take his seat among the peers.

Entrance of Royalties.

Then trumpeters and a few heralds, blazing in crimson and gold, announced the arrival of the royal children, the Prince of Wales, Princes Albert, George and Henry and the Princess Mary. The eldest two boys wore their blue, cadet uniforms, the others court dress. All took seats beside but slightly lower and in the rear of the thrones.

At this moment a roar of cheering outside and the crash of the guard's band as it broke into the national anthem proclaimed that the king and queen were alighting from their coach at the Abbey entrance.

The orchestra struck up the hymn "I Was Glad" and the same instant there marched down the aisle the king's chaplains-in-ordinary, two and two, followed by the canons of the Abbey in their darker copes of crimson worked with gold, with the dean bringing up the rear.

As the clergy disappeared behind the choir screen the heralds, pursuivants and officials of the three great chivalric orders of the Garter, St. Patrick and the Thistle made their appearance, fairly shimmering in their Plantagenet tabards of cloth of gold, emblazoned with the royal arms.

Behind them, carried by The O'Conor Don, Hereditary Standard Bearer Henry Scrymgeour-Wedderburn and Hereditary King's Champion Frank S. Dymoke respectively, came the banners of the three kingdoms—the blue and gold of Ireland the red lion of the Scotch and the ancient "leopard standard" of England.

Following, came the royal standard, borne by the Marquis of Lansdown; the red dragon banner of Wales, upheld by Lord Mostyn; the standard of India, carried by former Viceroy Lord Curzon, the standard of Canada, in the hands of former governor, the earl of Aberdeen; the standard of Australia, held aloft by former Governor General Lord Northcote, and the standards of New Zealand and South Africa, carried respectively by Lord Plunket and the Earl of Selborne.

The appearance of the colonial banner was a new feature in English coronation processions.

Next marched the Duke of Wellington, aged, bearing aloft the "Union Jack." Two small pages supported his grace's train and a third staggered under the weight of his coronet, on a cushion in front of him.

In line behind the duke was Keeper of the Crown Jewels Sir Robert C. Low, bearing a velvet cushion with the two ruby rings and a sword. At his heels were the four Knights of the Garter chosen to hold the golden canopy above the king's head during the anointing. Each was clad in the white satin dress of his order, with his garter on his knee and ruby velvet mantle about his shoulders.

Ministry in Line.

Premier H. H. Asquith in his simple cabinet minister's uniform of blue and white was followed by Lord Chancellor Lord Ashbourne of Ireland and the Archbishop of York, the latter in a cope of gold and white, touched with crimson damask. Lord High Chancellor of Great Britain Lord Loreburn succeeded this trio, walking alongside the Archbishop of Canterbury in state vestments of cream, blue and gold.

After them a herald and two pursuivants preceded the queen's regalia, three separate noblemen carrying the crown, the ivory rod with the dove and the scepter with the cross, under the escort of the Earl of Shaftesbury, her majesty's chamberlain and a group of sergeant-at-arms.

Then there was an awed hush as the queen herself, surrounded by her gentlemen-at-arms in scarlet tunics and with nodding plumes and with the Bishops of Norwich and Oxford as supporting prelates, moved slowly down the aisle.

Flashing with jewels—one scintillating mass of gold—her majesty made a picture calculated to impress even the beauties occupying the peeresses' seats, though the captious are said to have whispered among themselves that Mary did not really compare with her mother-in-law, Alexandra, on the corresponding occasion nine years ago.

The queen's train was nearly eighteen feet long and the rich purple velvet, bordered with ermine and emblazoned in gold with the emblems of the United Kingdom, the colonies and other heraldic devices. It was supported by Ladies Mary Dawson, Mabell Ogilvy, Victoria Carrington, Eileen Butler, Eileen Knox and Dorothy Browne, daughters respectively of the Earls of Dartrey, Airlie, Carrington, Lanesborough, Ranfurley and Kenmare.

Behind the trainbearers came the Duchess of Devonshire, mistress of robes, and the Duchesses of Sutherland, Hamilton, Montrose and Rutland, whose duty it was to hold the queen's canopy during the anointing. Eight noblemen and gentlemen of the suite followed.

Cheers for the Queen.

Except for the anthem pealing from the organ and choir, the great assembly had remained up to this time profoundly silent, standing reverently, but as the queen passed the enclosure set apart for their benefit, the boys of Westminster school exercised their traditional privilege of bursting into cries of "Vivat Regina Maria! Vivat Regina Maria. Vivat! Vivat! Vivat!

Followed by her attendants, the queen passed the thrones and took her seat in one of the "chairs of recognition." There was a slight pause, during which the breathless throng seemed oblivious of the sounds of the anthem and of the clamor of the Abbey bells. Then a group of gorgeously dressed state trumpeters appeared in the doorway. Among them was the Richmond herald in all his glory, supported by the Rouge Dragon and Bluemantle pursuivants.

The "king's procession" was about to enter. After the party of heralds trumpters and pursuivants, paced the Dukes of Argyll and Roxburghe, side by side. One bore the scepter with the cross, the other St. Edward's staff. Behind walked Lord Grey de Rothyn carrying the "gold spurs."

Next came three great noblemen with sheathed swords, emblematic of punishment, protection and mercy. Field Marshal Lord Roberts carried the first, Lord Kitchener the second and the Duke of Beaufort the third—the famous pointless blade, "Curtana."

Following the three swords were the four kings-of-arms—the Norroy king, the Clarenceux king, the Ulster king and the Lyon king—tabarded with the respective emblems of England, Wales, Ireland and Scotland. At their heels was the head of the heraldic brotherhood, Garter-King-of-Arms Sir Alfred Scott-Gatty, with the familiar parliamentary figure of the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod Sir Henry F. Stephenson at his left and the equally familiar figure of Lord Mayor of London Sir Thomas Vesey Strong, bearing the city mace, at his right.

Then came Lord High Constables the Earl of Erroll and the Duke of Abercorn, of Scotland and Ireland respectively, followed by Lord High Stewards the Earls of Crawford and Shrewsbury of the same two countries.

Then appeared the master of today's ceremonies. Henry, Duke of Norfolk, Earl Marshal of England, premier duke and earl of the realm, and bearer of a score of other titles. He wore his Earl Marshal's uniform under his robes and carried his baton of office, while two pages supported his train.

Beside him strode the Duke of Fife, the king's brother-in-law, carrying the lord high constable of England's baton, and also attended by two pages. Between these dignitaries, but attended by only one page, was the Marquis of Londonderry with the sword of state, ready to be buckled about the monarch's waist just before the placing of the crown upon his head.

The crown itself came next. The lord high stewart of England, the Earl of Chesterfield, bore it gingerly, glittering on its cushion like a single huge gem. On either side of the crown-bearer were the Earl of Lucan, holding the scepter with the dove and the Duke of Somerset with the orb, a golden ball six inches in diameter and circled with a fillet of pearls and precious stones.

His Majesty's Appearance.

Now a patch of scarlet, a cluster of nodding white plumes and the gleam of halberts announced the approach of the king's personal bodyguard. Following these twenty gentlemen-at-arms, there swept majestically across the blue carpet the Bishop of London carrying the crimson-bound Bible, the Bishop of Winchester upholding the chalice and the Bishop of Ely with the patina.

Then the king himself.

His majesty wore no ordinary uniform on this, his coronation day. His monarch's robes of cloth of gold, crossed by the ribbon and collar of the Garter, set off the beauty of the royal mantle which last did duty on the shoulders of the fourth George. On his head he wore the crimson "cap of maintenance" and his long purple robe trailed away behind him, supported by eight youthful noblemen, the sons of the highest peers in England.

"Vivat Rex Georgius! Vivat Rex Georgius! Vivat! Vivat! Vivat!" shrilled the Westminster school boys as the king walked to the second chair of recognition."

With the star actor's arrival very little attention was paid to the rearguard of the procession, though many notable personages followed behind their sovereign. The Earl of Granard was among them and so was the Duke of Buccleugh in the extraordinary old-world uniform of captain-general of the Royal Archer Guard of Scotland. So, too, were all the great soldiers and sailors of the realm.

Trailing after came the officers of the household, Hindoo orderlies and the bodyguards of the gentlemen-at-arms and the yeomen of the guard.

It was past noon when the Archbishop of Canterbury began the actual ceremony.

First on the program was the "recognition," or presenation of the king to the people. His majesty and the queen having knelt for a moment in silent prayer, George advanced to the center of the dais, while his wife seeated herself in the "chair of recognition." Then, followed by the Archbishop of Canterbury, Lord Chancellor Lord Loreburn, Lord Great Chamberlain Earl Carrington, Lord High Constable of England the Duke of Fife, Earl Marshal the Duke of Norfolk and Garter King-of-Arms Sir Alfred Scott-Gatty, the monarch faced successively to the east, south, west and north of the "theater," and at each corner the archbishop cried loudly: "Sirs, I here present to you King George, the undoubted king of the realm. Wherefore all you who are come this day to do homage, are you willing to do the same?"

As the words rang through the great edifice they were answered by mighty shouts of "God Save King George!" At each presentation the king bowed to the corner at which he had been acclaimed. The ceremony ended with a fanfare from the silver trumpets.

Communion Service Begun.

Then the king and queen were conducted to the chairs set for them at the south side of the communion table. The noblemen bearing the regalia, excepting those with the swords, presented their burdens to the archbishop who delivered them to the Dean of Westminster to be placed upon the altar.

The litany, sung by two bishops, followed and the communion service began. During the litany and the first part of the communion service the king sat bareheaded, but at the beginning of the sermon—a short one preached by the Archbishop of York—he resumed his crimson cap.

The Bishop of Durham and the peers with the swords stood at his majesty's right and the Bishop of Bath and Wells and Earl Carrington at his left. The queen had the Bishops of Norwich and Oxford at her right and left and was supported by her trainbearers and other attendants.

Standing in front of the king, the Archbishop of Canterbury asked: "Is your majesty willing to take the oath?"

King George replied, firmly and clearly: "I am willing."

"Will you solemnly promise and swear," inquired the archbishop, "to govern the people of this United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and the dominions thereunto belonging, according to the statutes in parliament agreed on, and the respective laws and customs of the same?"

"I solemnly promise so to do," said the king.

"Will you to your power cause law and justice in mercy to be executed in all your judgment?" continued the archbishop.

"I will," said the king.

"Will you," said the archbishop, "to the utmost of your power maintain the laws of God, the true profession of the gospel and the protestant reformed religion established by law? And will you maintain and preserve inviolably the settlement of the church of England and the doctrine worship, discipline and government thereof, as by law established in England? And will you preserve unto the bishops and clergy of England and to the church committed to their charge all such rights and privileges as by law do or shall appertain to them or any of them?"

"All this," said the king, "I promise to do."

Coronation Oath Taken.

This formula concluded, the king arose from his seat, and preceded by the sword of state, stepped to the altar, where he uncovered and knelt, while the archbishop presented to him the great Bible, open at the Gospels. Laying his right hand on the book, his majesty said: "The things which I have heretofore promised, I will perform and keep, so help me God." Then he kissed the Bible and formally signed the parchment upon which the oath was set forth.

Then the king returned to his chair and waited until the choir and orchestra had rendered the hymn, "Veni Creator," a prayer and the anthem, "Zadoc the Priest." Afterward, having, with the lord great chamberlain's assistance, taken off his cap of state and crimson robes, he took his seat in St. Edward's chair.

Four gentlmen in black brought forward the golden canopy and four Knights of the Garter advanced and held it over the royal head. The Dean of Westminster poured a few drops of holy oil from the ampulla into the quaint old spoon held ready to receive it, the Archbishop of Canterbury dipped his finger into the bowl and then, turning to the king, he marked the cross in oil on the crown of the latter's head, on his breast and on the palm of each hand, saying in conclusion: "And as Solomon was annointed king by Zadoc, the priest, and Nathan, the prophet, so be you annointed, blessed and consecrated king over this people, whom the Lord your God hath given you to rule and govern."

Having knelt for the archbishop's blessing, the king then reseated himself in St. Edward's chair and, the canopy having been removed, the Dean of Westminster threw over his shoulders the kingly vestments—the "colobium sindonis" and the "supertunica" — respectively a sleeveless surplice of fine white cambric, trimmed with lace, and a short-sleeved tunic of cloth of gold over which a swordbelt was worn.

Then the dean brought the "great spurs" from the altar and handed them to the lord great chamberlain, who knelt, touched the king's heels with them and returned them to the altar.

The nobleman with the sword of state next advanced and surrendered the weapon to the lord great chamberlain. The later buckled the belt around his majesty's waist and the archbishop, having blessed the sword itself, placed the hilt in the royal hand, with the words: "With this sword do justice and stop the growth of iniquity, protect the holy church of God, help and defend widows and orphans, restore the things that are gone to decay, maintain the things that are restored, punish and reform what is amiss and confirm what is in good order."

At the conclusion of this exhortation, George ungirt the belt and going to the altar, offered the sword there, afterwards returning to his chair. As he took his seat, the blade's original bearer, Lord Londonderry, advanced to the altar to "offer the price of it and redeem" his charge. He handed to the dean a pure velvet scabbarded sword previously given to him by the lord great chamberlain, received the sword of state in exchange, unsheathed it and, during the rest of the ceremony, carried it down before the king.

Ceremony of Investment.

Then the monarch rose to be invested with the armilla or bracelet and the imperial mantle of cloth of gold and when he had resumed his seat, the Archbihhop placed the orb in his right hand, saying; "Receive this imperial robe and orb and the Lord your God endow you with knowledge and wisdom, with majesty and with power from on high, the Lord clothe you with the robe of righteousness and with the garments of salvation. And when you see the orb set under the cross remember that the whole world is subject to the power and empire of Christ our redeemer."

At this the king returned the orb to the archbishop, who replaced it on the altar and slipped the ring upon the fourth finger of his majesty's right hand. "Receive this ring," he said "the ensign of kingly dignity and of defense of the catholic faith."

As the two scepters were next brought up, the Duke of Newcastle stepped forward to discharge his duty, as Lord of the Manor of Worksop, of placing an embroidered glove on the kingly right hand. Into the same hand the archbishop thrust the scepter with the cross, the Duke of Newcastle kneeling meanwhile and supporting the king's arm. Then, in his majesty's left hand was placed the scepter with the dove."

"Receive the rod of equity and mercy," said the archbishop. "Be so merciful that you be not too remiss. So execute justice that you forget not mercy. Punish the wicked, protect and cherish the just and lead your people in the way wherein they should go."

Now the Dean of Westminster brought St. Edward's crown from the altar. The archbishop took it, showing plainly in every movement, as he did so, despite his brave efforts to conceal his agitation, how deeply the preceding trying ritual had affected him. After a short prayer he placed the circlet gently but tremblingly upon the king's head.

Instantly every electric light in the Abbey was turned full on, the silver trumpets brayed the royal salute, the peers clapped their coronets upon their heads and the Abbey fairly rocked with the shouts of: "God Save the King!"

Outside the sacred edifice, the roll of the drums was quickly drowned in the roar of cheering from hundreds of thousands of throats.

George V has been crowned King of England.

Guns Thunder Welcome.

According to the requirements of the old ritual "the great guns at the tower were shot off" and the troops along the processional route—indeed, all over England—came to the royal salute.

As the dull boom of the tower cannon mingled with the clashing of the Abbey bells, the archbishop pronounced the exhortation: "Be strong and of good courage," and the choir took up the theme in Sir Walter Parratt's "Be Strong and Play the Man."

Then the archbishop advanced with the Bible. "Our gracious King," he said, presenting the book to his majesty, "we present you with this book, the most valuable thing that this world affords. Here is wisdom. This is the royal law. These are the lively articles of God." And with that he pronounced the benediction.

The "inthronization" followed. Theoretically, this means that the king is actually lifted by the bishops and noblemen onto the throne. In fact, he walked to it, surrounded by the clergy and great officers of state. As soon as he was seated, the noblemen grouped themselves about the steps and the archbishop addressed him.

"Stand firm," he said, "and hold fast from henceforth the seat and state of royal and imperial dignity which is this day delivered unto you in the name and by the authority of Almighty God and by the hands of us, the bishops and servants of God, though unworthy as you see us to approach nearer to God's altar, so vouchsafe the more graciously to continue to us your royal favor and protection. And the Lord God Almighty, whose ministers we are and the stewards of his mysteries, establish your throne in righteousness, that it may stand fast forevermore like as the sun before Him and as the faithful witness in heaven."

Then, led by the archbishop, the great nobles and prelates proceeded to do homage. In the old days it was customary for the entire assemblage in the Abbey to file past the throne, kneeling in passing it and swearing allegiance to the king. Today, the order is established according to rank.

First the Archbishop of Canterbury ascended the steps of the throne, knelt and took the oath for the clergy. The lesser dignitaries of the church knelt, too, as he did so, in their places, and repeated the words after the venerable archbishop, in each case, however, substituting their own respective names and ranks for those mentioned by their leader.

"I, Randall, Archbishop of Canterbury," recited the primate, "will be faithful and true, and faith and truth will bear unto you, our sovereign lord, and your heirs, kings of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and I will do and truly acknowledge the services of the lands I claim to hold of you as in right of the church. So help me God."

And the archbishop, rising, kissed the king's left cheek—a ceremony, however, which was dispensed with in the case of the other clergymen present.

Then came perhaps the most touching and human part of the ceremony—the Prince of Wales stepped forward to do homage for the royal family. Removing his coronet, the boy knelt before his father, while all the other English royalties knelt in their places, as the clergy had done, and repeated: "I, Edward, Prince of Wales, do become your liegeman of life and limb, and of earthly worship and faith, and truth I will bear unto you to live and die against all manner of folks. So help me God." And rising, with flushed face, the prince kissed his majesty who pressed his hand warmly.

All the other royalties, who had of course substituted their own names in repeating the oath with the prince, then advanced to kiss the monarch, and to touch his crown in token of their readiness to support the throne.

The royalties having resumed their seats, the peers next took the oath, dukes first, marquises second, earls third, viscounts fourth and barons last, the senior of each order, from the date of the peerage's creation, kneeling on the steps of the throne and touching the crown at the conclusion of the ceremony. The Duke of Norfolk took the oath for the dukes, the Marquis of Winchester for the marquises, the Earl of Shrewbury for the earls, Viscount Gormanston for the viscounts and Lord Kingsale, whose title dates back to 1172, for the barons.

This ended the homage, the trumpets pealed once more, the drums rolled and the great assemblage shouted: "God Save King George! Long Live King George! May the King Live Forever!"

All this time the queen had remained seated near the altar. The ceremony of her coronation, which followed, was much shorter and simpler than the king's.

Her majesty knelt on a faldstool between the altar and St. Edward's chair and was annointed, while four duchesses held the canopy over her. Then the Archbishop of Canterbury placed the royal ring upon her finger, lifted the queen's crown from the altar and placed it on her head, as he had placed the king's crown upon the king's. And all the princesses and peeresses put on their coronets and the congregation shouted: "God Save the Queen!"

Mary Is Enthroned.

Having received the scepter in her right hand and the "ivory rod surmounted by the dove" in her left, her majesty then went to her throne, supported by her bishops and ladies-in-waiting and bowing deeply to the king as she approached him.

This practically concluded the ceremony, but the communion service having been resumed, their majesties discarded their crowns and scepters for a time and knelt at the steps of the altar, where the king offered bread and wine and made his oblation, consisting of a rich altar cloth and a gold ingot weighing a pound. At the same time the queen offered her oblation of an altar cloth and "a mark's weight" of gold.

After prayers, the Archbishop of Canterbury administered the bread and the Dean of Westminster the wine, and the king and queen, resuming their crowns and scepters, returned to their thrones, to the triumphant strains of Sir Charles Stanford's "Te Deum" and the "Gloria in Excelsis."

A few moments later their majesties prepared to take their departure, and passing on either side of the altar, retired to St. Edward's chapel, where they divested themselves of such robes and insignia as they did not need for the return to Buckingham palace. They retained their crowns and scepters, however, and the full state procession having been reformed, made their way from the Abbey to commence their triumphal journey back to the palace.

cabinet. Premier Sir Elliot Lewis, or Tasmania, and Premier Sir Joseph Ward and Dr. Findlay, of New Zealand, were also among the colonial representatives.

The Indian and other oriental representatives included the Gaekwar of Baroda, the Maharaja Holkar of Indor, the Maharaja of Gwalior, the Maharaja of Kuch-Behar, the Maharaja of Idar, the Nawab of Rampur and the Nawab Sir Muhammed Asiam Khan, the last six being present in their capacities as personal aides-de-camp of King George.

Several of the Indian princes were accompanied by their wives, a most significant sign of changing times, for in the old days it would have been deemed more than improper for a high-caste Indian woman to appear in public and especially at a Christian ceremony. Conspicuous among these women was the Begum of Bhopal, a very distinguished and independent princess in her own country. She and the other Indian women appeared wearing the "burkha," or thick veil, completely hiding their features.

Americans Who Attend

London, June 22.—America was well represented among the peeress present at the coronation of King George and Queen Mary. Those entitled to seats in Westminster abbey were:

Consuelo, Duchess of Marlborough daughter of W. K. Vanderbilt, of York.

May, Duchess of Roxburghe, daughter of Ogden Goelet, of New York.

Helena, Duchess of Manchester, daughter of Eugene Zimmerman, of Cincinnati, and wife of an Anglo-American, the Duke of Manchster being the son of the former Consuelo Yznaga, daughter of Antonio Yznaga of Ravenswood, Louisana.

Florence, Marchioness of Dufferin and Ava, daughter of John R. Davies, of New York.

Margaret, Countess of Suffolk and Berkshire, daughter of Levi Z. Leiter, of Chicago.

Adela, Countess of Essex, daughter of Beach Grant, of New York.

Beatrice, Countess of Granard, daughter of D. Ogden Mills, of San Francisco.

Grace, Lady Newborough, daughter of Col. H. M. Carr of Kentucky.

Elizabeth, Lady Cheylesmore, daughter of F. O. French, of New York.

Vivien, Lady Decies, daughter of George Gould, of New York.

Lady Barrymore, former wife of the late Arthur Post, of New York.

Other American women to whom, though they were not strictly entitled to seats, the Abbey was open on account of their husbands' close court connections were Lady Barrymore's daughter, Neme, wife of Montague C. Eliot, who was a groom-in-waiting to King Edward; Margharita, Viscountess Maidstone, daughter of Anthony J. Drexel, of Philadelphia, whose husband is heir to the Earldom of Winchelsea, and the Hon. Mrs. John Ward, daughter of Ambassador Whitelaw Reid, whose husband is not only a personal friend of the King but who had unquestioned title to a place in the abbey with her father's official party.

Mary Lovise, Lady Leith of Fyvie daughter of Derrich A. January, of St. Louis.

THE FOURTH OF JULY AFFAIR IS ABANDONED

Committee Is Unable To Secure Desired Attractions.

The joint committee of soldier and citizens have given up the formal or paid program for a general Fourth of July celebration on account of not being able to secure satisfactory attractions at this late date. Celebrations will be given in many towns and cities this year on the Fourth, and have been arranged for early; hence, the scarcity of talent, such as balloon ascensionists etc., besides, both the city bands have been engaged by outsiders.

Those who have subscribed will not be called upon to pay, and those who have paid, their money will have it returned. It is the intention of many of the soldiers as well as many of the citizens to picnic at the fairgrounds and other suitable places in commemoration of the fiftieth anniversary of the civil war and it is hoped there may be large gatherings. The great regret is that the joint committee of soldiers and citizens did not start a month or six weeks ago to give an entertaining program that would satisfy all.

The Erie railroad has announced that the greater part of the improvements between New York and Chicago have been completed and the work may now be said to be entirely completed with a few exceptions. The work has been in progress several years and has involved the expenditure of millions of dollars. At every point on the line every curve has been eliminated as much as possible and track facilities were everywhere improved.

The sleeves of nearly all of the bathing suits are made elbow length.

TRAGEDIES MAR AVIATION MEET

Three Killed in Circuit Races in Paris.

TWO FLYERS ARE BURNED TO DEATH

Third Dashed to Pieces in Fall From Air.

There Are 6 000 Soldiers and Police on Duty To Hold Crowd of 25,000 in Check and When Fatalities Occur Great Throng Grows Frantic. Many Spectators Rush from Field When Ghastly Scene Is Enacted.

Paris June 19—Three men are dead as the result of the Journal's aviation circuit race and several other had close calls from death A crowd of 0 000 flocked to the Vincennes military field There were 6 0 soldiers and police on duty to hold the crowd in check Le Martin who was the twenty fifth to start had hardly cleared the ground when it was evident to the onlookers that he was not in control of the Beriot monoplane in which he was riding The apparatus tossed terribly and then the motor stopped LeMartin began to descend and as he described a circle in the air the crowd below was struck with terror When within 180 feet of the ground it was seen that all hope for the aviator was lost and he came headling to the earth He was killed almost instantly his head having been terribly crushed

Clothes Catch Fire

The next fatality occurred at Issy les Moulineaux Lieutenant Princeteau and a dozen soldiers who had been ordered to accompany the circuit in aeroplanes had appeared to leave for Vincennes and seven of them were in the air when the carburetter of Princeteau's machine set fire to the aviator He noticed that his clothes were burning and began to descend from a height of 75 feet when the wind struck the machine underneath The machine landed abruptly on its right wing and then the gasoline tank exploded In half a second the Bleriot was a mass of flames Lieutenant Princeteau made almost superhuman efforts to extricate himself from the frame of the burning monoplane but his legs were caught between a part of the machine and the ground and he was powerless The spectators among whom was the luckless lieutenant's brother could not approach the wreck because of the fierce heat When they finally were able to quench the flames the body of the officer was an unrecognizable mass of burned flesh

News was received later to the effect that Landron in a Pischof monoplane had fallen near Chateau Thierry It is reported that his machine took fire from the exploding petrol tank and that Landron was burned to death

Carros soon after starting was seen to be returning and contrary to the regulations he was returning along the course He passed just a few yards above the officials and the members of the press grouped at the starting line and descended to the ground near the main grandstand Shrieks arose from the spectators who were jammed so tightly that they could scarcely move but the soil fortunately was sandy and the machine stopped a few feet beyond the barriers The chief of police was in a rage and threatened to stop the race if there was a repetition of Garros act The officials fined Garros 500 francs and he prepared to make a second start He failed again, but this time landed at a point that was safe

TAFT DENOUNCES PATENT MEDICINES

Sends Special Message to Congress on Subject.

Washington, June 21 — Denouncing patent medicine manufacturers for false statements of the curative powers of their remedies, President Taft today in a message to congress urged as an emergency measure an amendment to the pure food and drug act prohibiting such deceptions of the public

Such an amendment is necessary declared the president, because of the opinion rendered by the supreme court, May 29, that the present law does not prohibit the knowingly false labeling of nostrums as to curative effects or physiological action A bill in line with the president's idea was introduced yesterday, by Representative Sherley, Democrat, of Kentucky

The president pointed out that 2 000 cases have been prepared for criminal prosecution under the food and drug act More than 150 cases involving the false labeling of alleged cures are now pending and because of the supreme court decision must be dismissed These cases involve said the president some of the rankest frauds by which the American people were ever deceived

An evil which menaces the general health of the people strikes at the life of the nation said President Taft The sale of dangerous adulterated drugs constitutes such an evil '

TARIFF MEASURE IS PUT THROUGH

Twenty-Seven Republicans Jump the Reservation.

FRANCIS, OF OHIO, IS AGAINST BILL

Berger, of Milwaukee, Stands by the Measure

The National House by Vote of 221 to 100 Passes Democratic Wool Revision Bill—Chairman Underwood Given Great Ovation as He Stands in Place To Make Final Motion Following Passage of Bill.

Washington, June 21—The house of representatives, by a vote of 221 to 100, passed the Democratic wool revision bill The announcement of the result was greeted with great applause by the Democrats who gave Representative Underwood of Alabama the majority leader an ovation as he stood in his place to make the final motion following the formal passage of the bill

Democratic joy was quickly changed to chagrin as Speaker Clark taking a document from the table announced that a message had been received from the president of the United States In the message the president said that the tariff board had not completed its report on the wool schedule and that for this reason he found it impracticable to comply with the resolution recently passed by the house calling for the data on wool collected by the board

The president's opportune announcement that the complete wool report of the board would be forwarded to congress in December of this year provoked applause among the Republicans who jeered at the Democrats the house as a whole having in mind assertions repeatedly made by Republicans in debate that it was unwise to attempt a revision of schedule K in advance of a scientific statement as to conditions by the tariff board Unconsciously the president had placed a joke on the Democrats

Berger Votes For Bill

Twenty seven Republicans jumped the reservation and voted for the Democratic bill Most of these were insurgents Representative Berger the Milwaukee Socialist stood by the bill as did Representative Aken of New York who is not classified politically Representative Francis of Ohio who comes from a big wool district was the only Democrat to desert his party

The wool bill goes to the senate with the prestige of having passed the house by a big majority The house insurgents are of the opinion that their brethren in the senate will assist the Democrats of that body in an effort that is to be made to bring the measure up for a vote Democrats and insurgents appear to be possessed of the idea that President Taft will be placed in an embarrassing position if the bill is put up to him for approval

DEATH CLAIMS PROCTOR KNOTT

A Noted Kentuckian Passes Peacefully Away.

MADE FAMOUS BY HIS DULUTH SPEECH

Calls Duluth "Zenith City of the Unsalted Seas"

Famous Address Was Inspiration of the Moment, Knott Having No Intention of Saying More Than Few Words—Humor of Speech Is Immediately Grasped by Hearers and He Is Heralded as Humorist.

Lebanon Ky June 19 —As peacefully as he had passed his declining days, former Governor James Procter Knott died at his home in this city at 6 o'clock Sunday evening The distinguished Kentuckian had been in poor health for several years but the end was not expected

Last week the former governor had a slight attack which was first thought to be pneumonia, but he recovered and was as well as usual Saturday night he was attacked with a choking spell from which he never rallied

Knott was born near Raywick, in Marion county Kentucky August 29 1830 At an early age Procter Knott went to Missouri where he studied law and was admitted to the bar at the age of sixteen

In 1858 he was elected to the legislature from Scotland county, Missouri serving several terms In 1860 he was elected attorney-general of Missouri and soon after the civil war started federal authorities took charge of the Missouri capital and all state officials who had not fled were required to take what was called the iron-clad oath of allegiance to the federal government

Sent to Congress

Attorney General Knott claiming that he already had sworn allegiance to the state and national government in his oath of office and deeming the test oath too stringent refused to take it and was arrested and sent to the arsenal in St Louis as a military prisoner The general in command there refused to hold him and he was released

Knott then returned to Lebanon Kentucky, in 1862 He practiced law until 1896, when he was elected to congress, where he served three successive terms and then was defeated by James Reed In 1875 he was returned to congress and served continuously until 1882

His Famous Speech.

In 1871, he delivered his famous Duluth speech, which gave him a national reputation, Knott naming the place the Zenith City of the Unsalted Seas' satirically immortalizing the St Croix river

The speech was the inspiration of the moment Knott had no intention of saying more than a few words when he took his feet to speak on an appropriation for Duluth harbor The humor of the thing occured to him as he was speaking and there was much in the situation at that time which justified his humorous comments

Having started in this vein, he carried the house with him, and never in the history of congress has there been such a scene as was witnessed while he was talking The members gathered about him, and he convulsed them with laughter, which was so great at times that the speech was interrupted

Knott Annoyed

It did not occur to him at the moment what the effect might be upon his own reputation, but the next day he discovered to his intense chagrin, that he was being heralded over the country as a genius of humor who eclipsed Artemus Ward, John Phoenix and Mark Twain

Although a hard-working member and a serious man Knott found himself handicapped during his entire congressional career, which repute which he made with that speech and the constant references to it, and congratulations which he received annoyed him as much as the song "Marching Through Georgia is said to have annoyed General Sherman, and as references to The Heathen Chinee' disgusted Bret Harte Knott quit congress because he thought his usefulness was closed there and returned to Kenutcky, to be elected governor

CORN KING ADDRESSES OHIO GRAIN DEALERS

Ohioans Gather for Sessions at Cedar Point.

Sandusky, O, June 21—Chicago corners in grain are of two kinds, according to George H Phillips, the Chicago corn king, in his address on Chicago Corners,' to the Ohio Grain Dealers, in session at Cedar Point, this morning Phillips declared that a corner is not always deliberately planned or even contemplated and accordingly, is just, the incentive being the first law of nature—self preservation

But where a corner is contemplated in the very beginning he said, and the possession of unlimited capital makes the result certain, I can not see any more right in it than I can in the holding up of a man at the point of a gun The recent corner in May wheat at Chicago, I am inclined to consider from the former viewpoint rather than the latter At the same time, the great wealth of the principals and the stubbornness with which actual conditions, so plainly apparent were ignored and reliance placed on money makes it difficult for us to give our approval to the course followed or to withhold our sympathy from those who suffere by the unwarranted advance

TWO KILLED IN A CANTON GRAVEL PIT

One Other Injured When Cave-in Occurs Today

Chicago Man Makes Ghastly Find in Home.

Chicago, June 21—What may develop into a murder mystery was reported to the police, today, when Herman Frank turned over to the police the bones of a human body, wrapped in a blood-stained undershirt which he had found stuffed into the furnace of a house on the North Side into which he had just moved Only the skull and one leg was missing Rats scampered out of the unused furnace when Frank opened it

The odor of flesh was still discernible about the bones The police are unable to determine whether the flesh was burned away from the bones, or eaten away by rats.

MYSTERY NEARS SOLUTION NOW

Battleship, Maine, Being Slowly Uncovered

INTERIOR SPACES BEING EXPOSED

Wreckage Still Hides Cause of Explosion.

Skeleton of Famous Vessel, Coral-Encumbered and Swarming with Grimy Workmen, Stands Specter-Like Above the Green, Slimy Pool Within the Huge Cofferdam Examination To Be Made Soon.

Havana, June 21—The skeleton of the Maine, coral-encumbered and swarming with grimy workmen engaged in cleaning the upper works and exploring as far as possible the exposed interior spaces, stood specter-like, yesterday, above the green, slimy pool within the cofferdam, when the water level was reduced fifteen feet One additional foot had been pumped out during the night small as it was, the reduction served to reveal a large area hitherto entirely submerged Every additional inch discloses more terrible evidence of the appalling character of the explosion

All attempts to study or identify any of the portions of the great ragged mass of upheaved steelwork, once the massive bow of the battleship, it appears, will be absolutely futile until all is completely exposed The lowering of the water below the level of the spar deck amidships shows the deck abreast the engineroom on the port side greatly bulged up, under which the whole side of the ship appears to have been blown up

Protruding from this aperture are twisted masses of steel, apparently steam pipes and other appurtenances of the main engines, but all so distorted and corroded as to defy identification for the present

Wreckage Hides Mystery.

Along the water on the starboard side is visible the long row of dead lights of the berth deck adjacent to the ward room and some of the officers quarters An examination of these will be impossible until the water level has been further reduced

During the exploration of the stern superstructure today the searchers found an ivory hilted sabre in a fair state of preservation It doubtless belonged to lieutenant, now major, Albertus W Catlin the officer in command of the ships marine guard and recently commanding the expeditionary brigade of marines at Guantanamo

They also found in the captain's cabin a small compass much corroded a bottle of bay rum perfectly preserved, small toilet artiles and a quantity of chinaware belonging to the ward room and officers state rooms

Brigadier General Bixby expects to hold the water at the present level for several days and it is hardly possible that additional relics will be discovered

AFFAIR ONE NEVER TO BE FORGOTTEN

Thousands Swarm Around the White House.

All Washington Turns Out To Make President's Silver Wedding Anniversary a Society Event Long To Be Remembered in the Capital's History—Mrs Taft Greets Hundreds of Guests

Washington, June 20—It will be many a day before the national capital forgets the silver wedding of President and Mrs Taft Everyone, from the most exclusive cavedweller to the newest member of congress, seems willing to admit that the reception was one of the most notable social affairs ever held at the White House

With the weather absolutely perfect the White House grounds formed almost into a fairyland, the 5 000 invited guests having the best kind of a time and four times that many interested and enthusiastic spectators standing 20 deep outside the spiked iron fence that surrounds the executive mansion, President Taft as he stood at the head of the receiving line with the first lady of the land did not seem to have a care in the world He was particularly happy as he said repeatedly in the course of the evening, that Mrs Taft lately not in the best of health seemed to have won strength for the occasion and was with him every moment of the time that the thousands of guests were filing by exchanging handgrips and expressing the hope that they might be spared to be present away off in the future at the Tafts' golden wedding day

Moore Poor Prophet

Incidentally, it is not at all improbable that President Taft, considering the success of the reception, will issue a ukase increasing the salary of Professor Willis Moore, who makes the government's weather Moore appeared at the White House early in the day with a long face and delivered the most pessimistic predictions Everybody at the White House was much worried at the atmospheric outlook, for the day opened gray and dismal, with a wet blanket of fog, so Mr Moore ran over to brighten things up After he had talked with the president he told the newspaper men that the "president has only one chance in a hundred of having a garden party" Then he elaborated The weather however, brightened up after Professor Moore's visit

To those entering the White House either from the avenue side or the east carriage entrance there was little beyond a searchlight playing on the fountain in front of the portecochere and a few clusters of lights on the lawn to indicate what awaited them on the spacious grounds in the rear Back there, though, the scene was beautiful beyond description All around the outer edge of the acres of level, short clipped grass within the White House enclosure swung Chinese lanterns of fantastic design, blocks upon blocks of them barely six inches apart, swaying in the light breeze and casting their queer shapes and shadows on the lawn Within the great square of lanterns, every tree, shrub and bush wore a dress of colored light

For two hours the president stood in line shaking hands Mrs Taft stood up beside the president during the first three-quarters of an hour, and then, at his earnest solicitation, sat down beside him But she did not seem fatigued in the least, continuing to shake hands with each well wishing guest and having a welcoming smile for everyone

Bands Play Continuously.

Throughout the formal part of the reception the Marine band played and the Engineers band played also The music was practically continuous Major Archibald Butt the president's aid who introduced the swiftly passing thousands to the president and Mrs Taft had a hard time making his voice heard

After the last guests passed under the canopy President and Mrs Taft, after walking around the softly shaded lawn, stopping here and there to chat with a friend or greet an acquaintance went indoors The Engineers band followed them to the east room to play dance music and from that time on the reception was informal to a degree Some of the guests danced others sought the refreshment tables but by far the greater number remained out on the lawn in the cool night air, walking around the lantern marked enclosure or sitting under the illuminated, Christmaslike trees

Aunt Delia Torrey of Milbury, Mass, whose famous pies her nephew Will frankly enjoys above almost anything else eatable, seems to have taken Washington by storm Every time she goes out riding in the White House automobile since her arrival on Sunday Aunt Delia has been kept busy bowing and smiling to the lifted hats and genial greetings

A marriage license has been issued to Miss Goldie Fern Gelbaugh, of this city, and Royal F Martin, of Columbus
